lets not allow him entrance at all, if the cage is open the lion will come out and attack, so lets keep that cage door shut, lets remmember, this is the challange hashem want us to accomplish, otherwise we wouldnt have them, lets go thru it together, we will make it.

I hope to stop.

I understand - there is no such thing as falling

After every fall get up! And you're going and manage to get up

Also if you're fall-not terrible. Have to get up not to despair

That's what I understood from the fall

Good luck my brothers! You can hi sababa nice to hear from you. Maybe go do something that takes energy like play some ball or go running or beat up your younger brother.

Sababa- try to clearly experience the feeling of helplessness you feel in these moments of weakness. Realize how completely powerless you are to your desire. You are on a website screaming out for help but yet you still are powerless to your temptations. Experience this honesty vividly. Its the pit of emptiness. Allow this feeling of powerlessness to be your guide in allowing you to realize that you need help. You've taken step one by reaching out, now take step two and truly give yourself over to this site and the people who can guide you towards recovery. And then recovery will begin. Give yourself over now!!!! You are not smarter then your addiction, YOU NEED HELP!

Of course you do not know what to do; and of course its very hard for you. That's what all of us are here for. There's no easy way out. There's no quick solution. It's the fight of your life. You've taken step 1: that is to realize that you have an addiction. You've even had the courage to reach out for help. Now have the courage to accept the help, and follow it even though your desires are overwhelming.
