

My photo choice

I know the picture I picked is not happy. I choose it because I want to remember the pain I am on the road away from and what I would feel like if CH'S I fall. Also I felt like I was living underwater till I found the holy people here.

The water could also be the waters of renewal. I am emerging from these waters towards a new life.

My many objective is to use the picture to help me avoid complacency. Which is a big problem for me both in the short term and long term. The picture sends shivers down my spine also but that what I want. The pain of not being in control is still fresh and by recalling it I am more committed to rules that keep me safe.

I know that I need to lead a fulfilling life to avoid the pull of lust addiction but I also need to remember that I am powerless after some point and then my life becomes unbearable (unmanageable).

Bardichev, you got me laughing out loud at 12:30 at night!

Holy Yid,

Your picture is downright scary, but if that helps to motivates you, we will stand behind your for this fight. Perhaps for day 90 you will pick a picture of a swimming winner holding up the gold trophy! (Although you may have to cut out the swimming goggles as Bardichev is possessive when it comes to pictures of cool eye-wear!)

If it wasn't spooky enough here is the home run.

It looks like a vampire in a pool of blood to me. now that's spooky!
