

on a side note...

Posted by coby613 - 23 Mar 2012 13:39

i was watching this movie a while back and something in it just came to mind. the characters were talking about p* movies and one of that said something very deep i would like to share and get your opinion. I thought it was very well written: "if the casting and execution of the movie are all basically the same, why do people keep buying it? desire. Desire is built into human nature. and the nature of desire is when one gets bored of one movie he needs something new to renew and fuel his desire. that's why it's a successful franchise".

good quote/bad?

agree/disagree?

opinions?

=====
=====

Re: on a side note...

Posted by gibbor120 - 23 Mar 2012 15:27

The nature of desire is "the more you feed it the more you need it". It's like drinking saltwater to quench your thirst - SURE to backfire.

=====
=====

Re: on a side note...

Posted by mifatfait - 28 Mar 2012 23:48

I like the example of saltwater.

??? ??? ?? ????? ?????? ??? ?????? ???

=====
=====