

Internet with no images

Posted by gyegye2 - 15 Nov 2012 13:57

hello,

is there any way i can install a software which should make that images should not display in my browser?

and if yes can i have a password that i shouldn't uninstall it.

I don't want to change my ISP, i want to install it on my current browser.... maybe

Thank you

Those will work but can be undone just as easily. I think he's looking for something he can't change back.

there is probably a way to make preferences password secure (I dont have chrome; dont personally know). If so just get someone else to hold the password.

What operating system do you have? You might be able to make someone else administrator.

I don't know the detailed instructions but it appears that User Account Control on Windows 7 will do this. You can limit changes to any application.

www.howtogeek.com/howto/11584/understanding-user-account-control-in-windows-7/

If you are not tech-savvy enough to figure this out by experimentation you can take it to someone who is.

Either way you will need to make some kind of administrator user on your machine and give the password to somebody else.
