I am totally beat. The Lust has been living inside of me since shabbos and just existing with it is completely draining. It's kind of a morbid routine now. He shows up with a fantasy in my head; I shake it off, move on. I keep praying that G-d doesn't present me with an opportunity to act out, all the while feeling in my guts an intense desire to do just that. That's also exhausting.

You know what I kind of feel like? Anyone ever read the story of Sinbad? One of the journeys he makes takes him to an island where this decrepit, wrinkled old man immediately jumps on his shoulders, clamps his legs around Sinbad's neck, and refuses to let go. Sinbad can't get free; somehow the geezer's legs are too strong. He starts trying to go about life with this guy on him, but the old guy steals the coconut when he tries to eat it, knocks the water out of his hands, etc. And Sinbad is just getting exhausted. Pick up a fruit, knocks it out. Pick up a fruit, knocks it out. That's me.

(As I recall, Sinbad wins eventually by making some wine, which the old guy steals and drinks. And he keeps making more until the guy gets drunk and Sinbad can peel him off. Anyone want to try to bring that in to the metaphor? I'm too tired to make it work somehow.

only you can come up with the courage and energy to knock off this guy grabbbing onto you, the question is; do you see yourself being without him.

just start dreaming ... dream about the hero who stands up to the toughest of challenges. it doesn't cost anything and is easy to do. act as if you can overcome your challenges.

Mr. Smith, you won't win if you keep struggling with it head on. You need to learn to let go of the lust and give over the fight to Hashem. The 12-Steps can help you learn how to do this. Just look at guys like Dov. He had a raging addiction to lust, and he's 11 years sober today. One day at a time. What's their secret??? If you want what he has, do what he does.

I really want to understand what this means. I totally don't get what it is I'm supposed to do to "give over" the fight.

It's deep.
Deep. Read it again another a few times. Bottom line is, we need to work the steps with those who have done it before us. Cheshboinos and Meforshim won't help. Dov can explain it to us from today till next year; but we need ACTION not words.

It sounds like I need a sponsor and some friends to go through this with. Yes?

Yes, and you can get that by joining either Boruch's or Duvid Chaim's phone groups, or finding an SA group in your area.
