

Feeling let down after R"H?

Posted by Momo - 21 Sep 2009 12:21

Hi,

If you are still feeling great after R"H, that's super, and this is not the place for you.

Are you feeling the hum drum of regular life already? Especially if you're back at work and facing the same challenges as before R"H.

Do you feel like you've changed in shul but back to the same person once you've stepped into your office?

How do you deal with it?

Are you bored, upset, grumpy?

Let's kvetch together, or get/give some chizuk!

still on a high from R"H was that a reference to what i said?

momo, forget the past, which includes yesterday...work on today, on this hour...dont let your addiction get you down...instead, you need to decide that you will take a stand against it...to do so you will need strength, resolve and in my case, a fist clenched in rage...but you dont need sadness or depression...that will only make it harder...one day at a time...

Re: Feeling let down after R"H?

I came upon LKT site last Friday. Truth be told I was googling "frum rage" when this came up. I was not looking for anything like this. I first browsed this site with a mix of curiosity and contempt. Like many here, I have been kvetching (and often not kvetching at all) for over 15 years. I tried all sorts of ways out and nothing worked. At first browse, I was pretty convinced that this site will not work - certainly not for me.

I see myself as different than others here. I am not at all like Uri or Momo, god bless them, with their "this is so hard" this and "i hate my life" that. I see myself more grounded. I will never complain with Hebrew words in an English sentence intentionally and will absolutely never kvetch in Yiddish at all. So I saw this site as a place for kvetchy snow flakes. Kvetchy snow flakes who kvetch. I am not a snowflake and I don't kvetch.

But there is something very real here; I sense that now, and I want this to work (- and I need your help, you kvetchers!). I have been kvetching since Friday, which is pretty insignificant for most people but for me is nothing short of a miracle. I cannot fathom 90 days straight of kvetching. I can't even imagine 30. The addiction simply has too tight a grip on me. (another kvetch!) Instead, I will work on 8.

Days 1-7 have been absolutely torturous. I pray this gets easier at some point

Rage its completely normal to experience withdrawal symptoms in the first week or 2.

Just stay strong my friend.

You have a strong group of friends here holding your hand.

Just make a red line; i.e. i will only kvetch this (fill in the blank yourself) much, and no matter what, do not pass this limit.

We are hear for you man.

Did you read through the kvetch handbooks yet?

Print them out and read somewhere privately so noone knows about your issue,if youre insecure.

Mostly women deal with this,but we are making a men's wall of honor shortly iy'h.

All the best
