None of us are perfect...but most of us have grown from being here, often in ways we never imagined possible!

I've been clean for close to 6 months - when i first joined, I couldn't imagine being clean for a few weeks!

So join us, and grow!

Hmmnn: lies, danged lies, and statistics.

The combination of my PC and my handheld means GYE seems to think I'm here constantly. I'm not. Others log in "forever," but of course nothing is forever. So the number of false positives is huge. (FP= they show as here but they're not really.)

We also have folks who come in for a second and log out again. They might not even show as online, but they have been. So the number of false negatives could be huge. (FN=they show as NOT here but they HAVE been.)

I agree with your general premise that there's LOTS more to gain by joining the party (post; get posted on) than sitting as a wallflower (OMG; that poster said WHAT??). But I don't think the point is that the lurkers are all a buncha woosies (which they are). It's that there's so much more they could have if only they took that first couple of risky scary steps of registering and then posting.

But come on, folks, how tricky could that really be? Pretend you're not really registering as a sex offender who can't work with children anymore (because that's NOT it) but just that you're registering with aish or arutzsheva for access to a higher level of Torah (because that's what this IS - it's avodah of the highest order).

So, don't listen to the statistics. But do listen to your heart. Pick up that phone and call today: 1-800-#####-4-U (okay, I'm kidding). Visa and Mastercard accepted. And, if you're over 50: out of town call collect.

Also, I'd imagine that a nice portion of the "Guest" users that appear in the list aren't even live humans. Many of them are search engine bots sent out from Google, Yahoo, and MSN, and their sole purpose is to scrape data from websites so they can properly rank them within their search engines. They appear as "Guest" users, but they're just scripts...

Good thing that they can't post, I never did learn all those script letters. Cursive writing is not my forte.

I suppose you're suggesting that the "hidden one" is Moshiach. [?] And yep, I've been wondering for ages, too. Perhaps the best way to get him to show up is to clean up our acts.

SO WHY DON'T WE ALL JUST... REGISTER, LOG IN, SUPPORT EACH OTHER, SHOW UNCONDITIONAL LOVE, AND BRING MOSHIACH? Sounds so simple.... So just do it, all you 'lurkers,' you!
