Please click on the spoiler button below and read the nice Trucking Story, and tell me what type of Rebbi you think is better to shamefully go to - yeah I know that's not necessarily the typical Rebbi story, but the point is going to someone that knows you can get you to good places in life I think

I was going to comment that the plan seems to be really using Rebbeim. Some Rebbeim can provide a lot of help in this inyan and some can't. But to deliberately go over to a Rebbi when there is no intention of conversing or when you aren't trying to actually get help seems wrong. What happens if the Rebbi gets into a conversion with one of the chevra? Now what? "Oh, I'm sorry Rebbi, I was just using you as a shame motivation, can't talk, bye!" It just seems terribly disrespectful. As always, we are the ones who got ourselves into this issue, why is the gut reaction to rely upon ourselves to come up with a solution? My journey to recovery really started when I reached out to a professional. It took very long, but it was in God's time. I'm not implying that you need professional help, you aren't exactly the first Yeshiva guy to watch porn, but maybe actually utilize your Rebbeim for their purpose. (Although with caution, as a beard and Torah knowledge doesn't mean they are versed in this subject).

Inspiration without action is like French Fries without ketchup. It just don't work for me.

Fish without chrein,

herring without crackers,

Baseball game without peanuts,

learning without a rebbe,
exercise without a headband,
football without cheerleaders, Chinese auction with no prizes,
band with no bass (no treble),
sex with no partner,
coffee without milk,

Do you get shlomo's drift?

Work it!

Herring with crackers?

In south africa we have a little thing called kichel. It translates to: Godsend.
