Due to different time zones and schedules, below picture is the current appearance and noise level of our group. Hence, just like Shua, Yosef, WS, and quiet start our own issues without necessarily responding to everyone else. I will do so again.

I am going to give WS a Karma, because he emailed me that I am so special and it made feel real good. Thank you sir. I have alluded to tragedies in my life and it is so hurtful how frum Rabanim are acting like Reshaim against me. Goyim, I understand corruption. Frum Rabbanim? So hurtful! I have to remember Hashem is in charge. He can save me or choose to allow me to continue living in Gehinom and shine as a shining example in a community where I am starting to be looked down upon. WS complimented me on a similar issue where I am looked down upon for certain chesronos that I have and I have used my experience to help others (unless you meant how Hashem rewarded me for my earlier bitachon)

Karma granted to WS.

See the emunah I live with? Due to my Karmas, I have placed 2 different people ahead of me. But I do what is right (giving Karma where deserved) and Hashem will do for me what is right

Shua sir,

You have not posted in 18 hours and the GYE guidelines say one should strive to post once a week (no pressure. You still have 5+ days to respond. (Unlike the rasha who is giving me negative hours to respond -- They will respond in the morning if someone can take adverse action against me tomorrow -- Gee thanks). I am bitter. I will try to limit my outpourings.

Karma granted to WS.

How in the world did you add a Karma? I thought it had to be relegated (see my signature)

WWell I'm going to sleep now and keeping up with the 196ers is a full time job. Sending emails getting work done and dont forget the texting partners. So before I fall asleep I say goodbye to day two it was nice knowing you and I hope to never see you again. As weird all says another one rides the bus.

AAAlso, nothing personal but I use my phone for gye and every time I'm not by my computer and I'm feeling super lazy is when I want to give someone a karma but I can't figure it out on my phone. I did it once but I can't figure out what I did. I thought I remembered but I guess not.

What are you talking about?

That sounds crazy. We are here for you. Open up.

HaShem is definitely in charge!

I hope it gets better for you very soon.

Can someone please explain what happened to the karma? Can I add to people's Karma or not? There re many people who need more Karma points and since I can only give them every six hours I'd like to know what I can or can't do.

Hazman Katzer Vihmelocha Mirubah to give out karma

Am I stuck just clicking thank you for all those posts. That's not sufficient for all these wonderful posts

To all those who begin posting when you decide that you're gonna change and then as time goes on you just fall off the map. Also to those times when we feel that something's bothering us and we want to share but tell ourselves that no one cares or is actually listening or that who are we helping by posting and many other excuses:

First, put it into perspective. If you are writing on your thread or detailing parts of your struggle you gain most of all. Stop worrying about if other people will gain from what you write. Did you worry about that the first time you posted?

No. You weren't posting for them - it was a personal experience.

Did that feeling of relief and freedom you felt after introducing yourself come from that you thought that you were helping others?

No. It came from you. You were able to let a part of your soul out and what was eating you up on the inside is now outside of you and you feel free. You were struggling internally and after you posted and wrote out your feelings you are not struggling anymore with those feelings. You let them out.

Also, people are reading what you write even if they don't comment. I find that knowing that people are reading what I wrote helps me clarify my thoughts. Again, it's a personal benefit that can also help others. And no it's not any more selfish than wallowing in despair about how nobody cares ... That sounds quite selfish to me - it's all about whether they care about me. I'm advocating that you be there for yourself just like you want others to be there for you.

Also, when I post, just the fact that I'm writing about myself clarifies an element of me for me. So if those benefits apply to you, don't ever feel like nobody is listening and you shouldn't post. We are listening and most important of all, you are listening. When you post, those feelings that were inside of you come out and you can now listen to them instead of just feeling them.

Good luck everyone. Help yourself by opening up. As the video link that's attached to I don't remember whose signature discusses, we struggle bc we're lonely. When you stay quiet and don't post you're adding fuel to that fire of loneliness inside you. Don't do it please. If not for your sake do it for mine. I care about you and so do so many other people here.

Again good luck

Where is the Karma thief who stole my karma?

The Grinch who stole Chanukarma

Thank you Shua for your post that I will IYH reread properly when I am more awake.

I hit 13 days. New goals in effect now. (where is the 'apply' button in Windows 10)?

WWell right before I posted that I gave you karma so logic dictates that your massive karma rush may have crashed the karma site.
