

This time I mean business!

Hi all,

Hashiva has hashiva-d. I don't know to what extent I will be posting or reading, but at this time I want to post about my current situation. I have been inconsistent. I guess I wasn't committed enough to be ready to do what it takes. Or maybe I thought that what it takes will not be possible for me to fulfill. But now I had a thought. Why do BTs usually remain BTs and never ever go back to be non frum? The answer is because they made a sharp cut. They cut themselves off from their old ways and paid a price. They bled when they cut. So it was a real cut - a real cut off. Up until now I have not really cut. There was nothing in place preventing me from going back in a weak moment. So I decided to cut.

I have given up internet access. My computer is whitelist only. My wife's computer is with a new changed password - her password which I don't know. I have decided not to access internet on my own. I am still in search for additional safeguards, which I plan to implement as I find them. Anyone with ideas for me, please say. I have started a new streak today. Not that I fell yesterday, but I have not been clean in the sense that I didn't cut. Today I cut, so today I'm considered clean. The streak is a plan of never return. I am discussing this with another GYE member, so that I make sure it's solid. I had been davening for a good plan, and Hashem hears even the prayers of sinners. May Hashem help us all.

is no money, because with money you can take care of things, and have presence of mind, but not when running around like a lost rat with no way to figure out how to pay for basics.

But, I am still keeping my resolve. That's major, I know. But I'm very much in pain at the moment.

Right there with you brother. All will work out, iyH.

Il woke up in a decent mood.

It's been downhill since.

But, I can't let the accumulation get to me.

I know exactly where it would lead to.

And how do you feel now after the call and unexpected deliverance (which delayed the call)?

I assume that helps yourself as it does us

Above was written after the call.

Smellyl situation under control, I think. Didn't affect more than two and I think we nipped it.

And, yes, it helped and is helpin'.

Sometimes though, I long for the olden days.

Hashem gives moods. Often we see that they don't directly reflect the situation. May he give you and us all, and our wives, a good mood for Shabbos and for Pesach preparations and for Pesach and further.

Goot voch!

Some new thoughts. I have been not too bad (I should say quite good, although not perfect) with the plan of not looking where I shouldn't, and also not listening to inappropriate radio. But I have been thinking, allowing myself to be entertained by impure thoughts. Although about my own wife, it's still wrong, because those thoughts are just as much in the category of ...?? ?????? ... ?????? ?????? as thinking about a stranger. So that needs to be a no no. May Hashem help me keep this halacha.

Also I need to daven for Hashem to give me other ways of fulfilling myself so I don't have the urge to resort to these things. How nice it would be if he would give me the ??? to learn ??????, but anything will do.

Also I am working on having emunah in connection to all of my difficulties, and I am making some positive headway with this. Baruch Hashem!
