

It's all their fault (and that's the truth!)

Posted by Trouble - 23 Mar 2017 20:22

So, I was driving, and yes it was a few miles past the speed limit as I was skimming the ash out of my Amaretto pipe, but who does the city think it is to make the limit 25 mph? There are no children running out between the cars, at least, there weren't any when I was driving. And while it is also true that I was looking at the sidewalk on the other side, as there was a cute bais Yaakov (or what looked like one, and why do they need to make their uniforms so similar?) girl walking with bobby socks, you heard me! Bobby socks! Where are the Rabbanim? What are the principals and teachers doing? Can't they see what these girls are causing the boys and the men in this city? It's not like we are in some darfshtatt in Texas! This is holy-ducking BoroPark! They should know better and they don't! I am not even discussing the length of her skirt. My goodness gracious! Don't they check the sizes before they release the uniform skirt! Appalling! So, anyway, yes, I was looking out of the corner of me eye; ok, I'll be honest (you hear that? I'm actually admitting here, so don't go off on me), it was more than the corner, but who can blame me? I'm a guy and I'm normal and I exercise; I'm good looking and attractive, and these girls are dressed to kill (their teachers and parents will burn in Hell for this)! And then, it happened! The guy/gal in front of me driving the fancy delancey Lexus, just stopped. The gall! I hate these people who think they can press the brake whenever they ducking please. Brakes should be used at the end of the blocks, and then, only if there is a light, or if there is a blind man crossing with an elderly woman. So, back to the story (I do not understand why you keep interrupting me): "It" braked all of a sudden, and I needed to slam on my brakes (while I was still thinking of you know what, and you know whose fault that was), and my car swerved (which is another thing; why can't they make cars like they used to that stop when you press or tap on the brakes; now, they skid to the side, jerk and then stop; idiots!), and it was then that I heard the screeching, scratching sound. I wasn't sure what it was, but it did seem that it was coming from the truck which was parked illegally to my right; yes, can you believe it? Illegally! He had at least four inches between his wheels and the curb! What's up with that? All they do is drive and yet they can't park like a normal human being. Somebody on the side started waving his hands in the air, motioning for me to stop, but there was no way I was gonna listen to a Salem menthol smoking grunt of a guy. If it was his truck, then it's just his fault, and I will clear that with a couple of my Rabbeim shortly, and if it wasn't his truck, who does he think he is to smoke in public, and menthol to make it worse. I needed anyways to chase down that short-stopping-Lexus-driving son of a bitch who caused that scratching sound! As fate would have it (and fate always screws with me, except when it's hashgachah pratis that I should be tested based on the high level that I'm on), the Lexus made the light (if you can call it that, for the yellow was already turning red, and it was clear to anyone that he ran it), but I missed it. Two yeshivah boys were smirking at me, holding up a dangled side mirror with several wires coming out of it. It was then that I lost it! And who could blame me? I jammed the gear into park and ran out of the car, yelling at those two boys (who anyways should be in seder now; what's up with that? Is there no learning anymore in Yeshivah? This would never have happened if I was appointed the First year Beis Medrash Rebbe, like it was so deserving, and instead, they appointed that so-called masmid, halachah expert, who just happened to be the nephew of the Rosh Yeshivah! Sick nepotism is what I say, and look at the catastrophic results!) to wipe their smile off their faces. I screamed, "why the Hell did you pull my mirror off my car?" They looked at me with that glum look, as if I was nuts. This really ticked me off. They said, "Excuse us mister, but your mirror came off when you sideswiped that truck." It was then that I realized, and thank God that I am 61 days clean (of any unclean thoughts involving various genders in various places at various times without first doing fifteen pushups and reciting tehillim chapter 09 backwards), for it was only due to my sobriety streak that I was able to realize that it was all a slap on the wrist for me looking at the uniformed girl (and a friendly reminder that I should probably get a filter, stop watching movies (mostly r rated), not shake any business associate, acquaintance, acquaintance's friend, etc hand, shoulder – and of course if they bump into me or get within my daled amos, I cannot be faulted), and I should keep my eyes, hands and feet on the road, which reminds me: Where is that crazy Lexus driver?

=====

=====

Re: It's all their fault (and that's the truth!)

Posted by Trouble - 28 Mar 2017 12:41

GrowStrong wrote on 28 Mar 2017 12:09:

3 to the P 3 to the M #nochazaka

Nothing beats a nice little kerfuffle with the wife to get in the way of a mitzvah but I waited until after Kedusha before skidaddling!

Lesson learnt: taking the blame after being blamed doesn't always help.

Stressful day today so it was expected.

Don't forget: it's always her fault!

=====

=====

Re: It's all their fault (and that's the truth!)

Posted by GrowStrong - 28 Mar 2017 12:52

Trouble wrote on 28 Mar 2017 12:41:

GrowStrong wrote on 28 Mar 2017 12:09:

3 to the P 3 to the M #nochazaka

Nothing beats a nice little kerfuffle with the wife to get in the way of a mitzvah but I waited until after Kedusha before skidaddling!

Lesson learnt: taking the blame after being blamed doesn't always help.

Stressful day today so it was expected.

Don't forget: it's always her fault!

Where were you when I took the blame?

=====

Re: It's all their fault (and that's the truth!)
Posted by Trouble - 28 Mar 2017 12:52

Trouble wrote on 28 Mar 2017 12:41:

GrowStrong wrote on 28 Mar 2017 12:09:

3 to the P 3 to the M #nochazaka

Nothing beats a nice little kerfuffle with the wife to get in the way of a mitzvah but I waited until after Kedusha before skidaddling!

Lesson learnt: taking the blame after being blamed doesn't always help.

Stressful day today so it was expected.

Don't forget: it's always her fault!

A productive way of letting her know that is by saying: "honey, I know that when you are stressed in such a manner and you are not acting yourself, I should really be even more helpful than I usually am."

This way, you do not admit full guilt and even the small amount of culpability is also her fault.

In taking this kind of blame, it is a win, win, win.

=====
=====

Re: It's all their fault (and that's the truth!)
Posted by GrowStrong - 28 Mar 2017 13:01

Trouble wrote on 28 Mar 2017 12:52:

Trouble wrote on 28 Mar 2017 12:41:

GrowStrong wrote on 28 Mar 2017 12:09:

3 to the P 3 to the M #nochazaka

Nothing beats a nice little kerfuffle with the wife to get in the way of a mitzvah but I waited until after Kedusha before skidaddling!

Lesson learnt: taking the blame after being blamed doesn't always help.

Stressful day today so it was expected.

Don't forget: it's always her fault!

A productive way of letting her know that is by saying: "honey, I know that when you are stressed in such a manner and you are not acting yourself, I should really be even more helpful than I usually am."

This way, you do not admit full guilt and even the small amount of culpability is also her fault.

In taking this kind of blame, it is a win, win, win.

Will you be my sponsor?

=====

Re: It's all their fault (and that's the truth!)
Posted by Markz - 28 Mar 2017 14:24

GrowStrong wrote on 28 Mar 2017 13:01:

Trouble wrote on 28 Mar 2017 12:52:

Trouble wrote on 28 Mar 2017 12:41:

GrowStrong wrote on 28 Mar 2017 12:09:

3 to the P 3 to the M #nochazaka

Nothing beats a nice little kerfuffle with the wife to get in the way of a mitzvah but I waited until after Kedusha before skidaddling!

Lesson learnt: taking the blame after being blamed doesn't always help.

Stressful day today so it was expected.

Don't forget: it's always her fault!

A productive way of letting her know that is by saying: "honey, I know that when you are stressed in such a manner and you are not acting yourself, I should really be even more helpful than I usually am."

This way, you do not admit full guilt and even the small amount of culpability is also her fault.

In taking this kind of blame, it is a win, win, win.

Will you be my sponsor?

Too late

=====
=====

Re: It's all their fault (and that's the truth!)

Posted by Trouble - 04 Apr 2017 13:35

As people (or whatever you call those from countries in the south below the equator, on the (so-called) other side of the world (which I am not even sure really exists)) have been taking my words out of context, or taking context out of my words (which would serve them right), I feel the need to explain myself and to clarify (or not) my position on "blame."

I never said that one has the RIGHT to blame others. What I did say (I think) is that one should not automatically blame himself when there are others who are clearly at fault, or even if it's not so clear, and even if it's only partially their fault. Let us not get caught up in depression. The world can be sick and it is populated by sick people. Our actions perhaps can be justified by looking around us. Heck, it's easier than changing ourselves; isn't it? Why choose a difficult path when the answer is clearly (or not so clearly) in front of us, and it is not a mirror, but rather, it's the other guy/gal/#aborigine (and, yes, I know that I just traveled across the ocean, but seriously, is there a difference between the two? I view those countries as nothing more but a haven for beach volleyball); so, as an option, playing the blame game can work at times, and isn't this site all about games that work (and that can include throne games as well)?

=====
=====

Re: It's all their fault (and that's the truth!)
Posted by Workingguy - 04 Apr 2017 13:43

Well I will say that my sponsor used to tell me, based on something from the big book, that we are well aware that other people have serious problems and we know that they have a role in our conflicts and issues.

BUT- the book says that we can only clean our side of the street so not sure what difference it makes. If it makes you better to say that SOME of it is their fault (and no, not all) but I'll take responsibility for my piece because what else can I do, nothing wrong with that if it works for you.

=====
=====

Re: It's all their fault (and that's the truth!)
Posted by Trouble - 04 Apr 2017 13:54

Workingguy wrote on 04 Apr 2017 13:43:

Well I will say that my sponsor used to tell me, based on something from the big book, that we are well aware that other people have serious problems and we know that they have a role in our conflicts and issues.

BUT- the book says that we can only clean our side of the street so not sure what difference it makes. If it makes you better to say that SOME of it is their fault (and no, not all) but I'll take responsibility for my piece because what else can I do, nothing wrong with that if it works for you.

Speaking of what works for me, porn does at times as well.

=====
=====

Re: It's all their fault (and that's the truth!)
Posted by GrowStrong - 04 Apr 2017 13:59

Trouble wrote on 04 Apr 2017 13:35:

As people (or whatever you call those from countries in the south below the equator, on the (so-called) other side of the world (which I am not even sure really exists)) have been taking my words out of context, or taking context out of my words (which would serve them right), I feel the need to explain myself and to clarify (or not) my position on "blame."

I never said that one has the RIGHT to blame others. What I did say (I think) is that one should not automatically blame himself when there are others who are clearly at fault, or even if it's not so clear, and even if it's only partially their fault. Let us not get caught up in depression. The world can be sick and it is populated by sick people. Our actions perhaps can be justified by looking around us. Heck, it's easier than changing ourselves; isn't it? Why choose a difficult path when the answer is clearly (or not so clearly) in front of us, and it is not a mirror, but rather, it's the other guy/gal/#aborigine (and, yes, I know that I just traveled across the ocean, but seriously, is there a difference between the two? I view those countries as nothing more but a haven for beach volleyball); so, as an option, playing the blame game can work at times, and isn't this site all about games that work (and that can include throne games as well)?

We began to see that the world and its people really dominated us. In that state, the wrongdoing of others, fancied or real, had power to actually kill. How could we escape? We saw that these resentments must be mastered, but how? We could not wish them away any more than alcohol. This was our course: We realized that the people who wronged us were perhaps spiritually sick.

Though we did not like their symptoms and the way these disturbed us, they, like ourselves, were sick too. We asked God to help us show them the same tolerance, pity, and patience that we would cheerfully grant a sick friend. When a person offended we said to ourselves, "This is a sick man. How can I be helpful to him? God save me from being angry. Thy will be done.' "

=====
=====

Re: It's all their fault (and that's the truth!)

Posted by Trouble - 04 Apr 2017 14:05

GrowStrong wrote on 04 Apr 2017 13:59:

Trouble wrote on 04 Apr 2017 13:35:

As people (or whatever you call those from countries in the south below the equator, on the (so-called) other side of the world (which I am not even sure really exists)) have been taking my words out of context, or taking context out of my words (which would serve them right), I feel the need to explain myself and to clarify (or not) my position on "blame."

I never said that one has the RIGHT to blame others. What I did say (I think) is that one should not automatically blame himself when there are others who are clearly at fault, or even if it's not so clear, and even if it's only partially their fault. Let us not get caught up in depression. The world can be sick and it is populated by sick people. Our actions perhaps can be justified by looking around us. Heck, it's easier than changing ourselves; isn't it? Why choose a difficult path when the answer is clearly (or not so clearly) in front of us, and it is not a mirror, but rather, it's the other guy/gal/#aborigine (and, yes, I know that I just traveled across the ocean, but seriously, is there a difference between the two? I view those countries as nothing more but a haven for beach volleyball); so, as an option, playing the blame game can work at times, and isn't this site all about games that work (and that can include throne games as well)?

We began to see that the world and its people really dominated us. In that state, the wrongdoing of others, fancied or real, had power to actually kill. How could we escape? We saw that these resentments must be mastered, but how? We could not wish them away any more than alcohol. This was our course: We realized that the people who wronged us were perhaps spiritually sick.

Though we did not like their symptoms and the way these disturbed us, they, like ourselves, were sick too. We asked God to help us show them the same tolerance, pity, and patience that we would cheerfully grant a sick friend. When a person offended we said to ourselves, "This is a sick man. How can I be helpful to him? God save me from being angry. Thy will be done.' "

Bravo!

My playbook.

=====

Re: It's all their fault (and that's the truth!)

Posted by cordnoy - 04 Apr 2017 14:12

GrowStrong wrote on 04 Apr 2017 13:59:

Trouble wrote on 04 Apr 2017 13:35:

As people (or whatever you call those from countries in the south below the equator, on the (so-called) other side of the world (which I am not even sure really exists)) have been taking my words out of context, or taking context out of my words (which would serve them right), I feel the need to explain myself and to clarify (or not) my position on "blame."

I never said that one has the RIGHT to blame others. What I did say (I think) is that one should not automatically blame himself when there are others who are clearly at fault, or even if it's not so clear, and even if it's only partially their fault. Let us not get caught up in depression. The world can be sick and it is populated by sick people. Our actions perhaps can be justified by looking around us. Heck, it's easier than changing ourselves; isn't it? Why choose a difficult path when the answer is clearly (or not so clearly) in front of us, and it is not a mirror, but rather, it's the other guy/gal/#aborigine (and, yes, I know that I just traveled across the ocean, but seriously, is there a difference between the two? I view those countries as nothing more but a haven for beach volleyball); so, as an option, playing the blame game can work at times, and isn't this site all about games that work (and that can include throne games as well)?

We began to see that the world and its people really dominated us. In that state, the wrongdoing of others, fancied or real, had power to actually kill. How could we escape? We saw that these resentments must be mastered, but how? We could not wish them away any more than alcohol. This was our course: We realized that the people who wronged us were perhaps spiritually sick.

Though we did not like their symptoms and the way these disturbed us, they, like ourselves, were sick too. We asked God to help us show them the same tolerance, pity, and patience that we would cheerfully grant a sick friend. When a person offended we said to ourselves, "This is a sick man. How can I be helpful to him? God save me from being angry. Thy will be done.' '

From the paragraphs I skip when reading the Big Book on my calls.

IMHO, it is completely counter productive for recovery.

Are there sick people? Yes.

Are they the cause of our problems? Usually not.

Who is? Us/me.

=====
=====

Re: It's all their fault (and that's the truth!)
Posted by GrowStrong - 04 Apr 2017 14:27

cordnoy wrote on 04 Apr 2017 14:12:

GrowStrong wrote on 04 Apr 2017 13:59:

Trouble wrote on 04 Apr 2017 13:35:

As people (or whatever you call those from countries in the south below the equator, on the (so-called) other side of the world (which I am not even sure really exists)) have been taking my words out of context, or taking context out of my words (which would serve them right), I feel the need to explain myself and to clarify (or not) my position on "blame."

I never said that one has the RIGHT to blame others. What I did say (I think) is that one should not automatically blame himself when there are others who are clearly at fault, or even if it's not so clear, and even if it's only partially their fault. Let us not get caught up in depression. The world can be sick and it is populated by sick people. Our actions perhaps can be justified by looking around us. Heck, it's easier than changing ourselves; isn't it? Why choose a difficult path when the answer is clearly (or not so clearly) in front of us, and it is not a mirror, but rather, it's the other guy/gal/#aborigine (and, yes, I know that I just traveled across the ocean, but seriously, is there a difference between the two? I view those countries as nothing more but a haven for beach volleyball); so, as an option, playing the blame game can work at times, and isn't this site all about games that work (and that can include throne games as well)?

We began to see that the world and its people really dominated us. In that state, the wrongdoing of others, fancied or real, had power to actually kill. How could we escape? We saw that these resentments must be mastered, but how? We could not wish them away any more than alcohol. This was our course: We realized that the people who wronged us were perhaps spiritually sick.

Though we did not like their symptoms and the way these disturbed us, they, like ourselves, were sick too. We asked God to help us show them the same tolerance, pity, and patience that we would cheerfully grant a sick friend. When a person offended we said to ourselves, "This is a sick man. How can I be helpful to him? God save me from being angry. Thy will be done.' "

From the paragraphs I skip when reading the Big Book on my calls.

IMHO, it is completely counter productive for recovery.

Are there sick people? Yes.

Are they the cause of our problems? Usually not.

Who is? Us/me.

We don't all have the ability to hold no resentments and to never get hurt by our partners and friends actions.

We need to face the resentments and understand that while the root of the problem is us, and that while the majority of the resentments most likely come from FANCIED wrong-doings, ie that, that is not real, they like us are sick.

THEIR resentments, and inability to forgive or move on, is THEIR side of the street. Its not our side of the street.

"We asked God to help us show them the same tolerance, pity, and patience that we would cheerfully grant a sick friend."

By skipping out this section - you lose the importance of the fact that first and foremost it is ourselves that we need to show tolerance, pity and patience with. For they are like us. We are all spiritually sick.

The difference? The non-addict remains with the negative emotions and doesn't medicate it away. Or they medicate it, but without a need to increase the dosage or with the ability to stop as they choose.

The addict medicates it.

I will of course be happy to debate you at length on the phone the argument that there are ideas in the big book that are counter productive to recovery.

=====

=====

Re: It's all their fault (and that's the truth!)

Posted by cordnoy - 04 Apr 2017 15:11

I will listen; I will Probably not debate it.

I do not understand what you wrote.

Although others May be at fault, if it bothers Me, I need to work on what is wrong with me that I am affected.

=====

=====

Re: It's all their fault (and that's the truth!)

Posted by GrowStrong - 04 Apr 2017 15:16

cordnoy wrote on 04 Apr 2017 15:11:

I will listen; I will Probably not debate it.

I do not understand what you wrote.

Although others May be at fault, if it bothers Me, I need to work on what is wrong with me that I am affected.

Totally agree.

With tolerance, pity and patience.

=====

=====