I too am sexually attracted to my own gender. It sounds like there's some shame there. I understand that.

The mods are probably going to delete the post that I'm referring to, but I feel the need to share something about it. Someone made a hateful remark about my sexuality on this forum. Details aren't necessary. Moving on from the remark itself, he's obviously a very sick person and I truly wish that he finds his Higher Power, I actually feel a bit validated by it. I was clearly singled out by this person as someone who has homosexual attractions. I know that God gave them to me for a reason, and one reason that I believe is because I can be of service to others with similar situations and I can be an example of positive recovery for all. Maybe I can help people, even those who don't have homosexual attractions. If I can create a presence that results in someone spouting forth such a negative reaction, then I hope my presence can do same for a positive reaction. See, if I didn't make myself known on this forum and I wasn't so open about my attractions, then I wouldn't be singled out. I'm happy that I have a presence on this forum, even when I'm not as active, ironically. I'm grateful to my Higher Power for releasing me from shame and giving me the ability to be open about my sexuality. I hope that I can be there for other people and help them with their recovery.

Shlomo, you have been a source of chizuk and inspiration for me among many others. Your courage in being transparent about your challenges, the steps you have taken to overcome them, and your life in general has been a tremendous boost for all of us. Obviously the individual who is attacking you is one who needs our prayers. It is sad to see how some people are just not ready for recovery so they try to bring down others. Or maybe he just has a really hard life. I took the liberty of chatting with him about this (By the way this is his 4th username already - he keeps asking me to learn a specific Meiri with him so i know it's the same fellow.)

I saw him on the private chat so i confronted him about his inexcusable behavior towards you, and being that the chats are monitored, i assume i am permitted to copy the ":conversation" and paste it here. The moderators may delete it. Unfortunately he uses foul language but i think there is a toeles in the oilam here seeing how (i think) one should respond to such unfortunate individuals. The chat is recorded backwards so read from the bottom up. As you can see i was zoche to be name called too!

I think many are confused by this post. Who is it directed at - The gye SSA community?
