

Appreciation

Posted by jewish jew - 26 Mar 2019 22:06

Last week in the Midrash there are whole paragraphs praising the goodness of being appreciative & grateful of everything in life.

So after not posting on this forum for many years I would like to try and starting such a thread.

I have been pushing this off for a few weeks and so I'm posting this as a starting point, hopefully more will follow on a regular basis.

Now you may ask why in the GYE forums? Well because here are a group of people who takes things that people post seriously, with thought and understanding, unlike other places where if and when you post it very often becomes a joke or a heavily debated argument.

So Thanks You Hashem (& everyone here) for making this place, what it is!

I can't elaborate to much as it's something private and may give away to much details, but

Thank You Hashem for finding another opening for an appointment.

Wow I got an amazing call this week from someone I reached out to a few months ago regarding bureaucracy & he came me back out of the blue just when I thought it would cost me a small fortune that he'll do it for a fraction of the price.

Thank you Hashem!

I think I maybe should revive this thread even though not always will I have what to write.

There has been something sitting on my head heavily the last few months which affected me a lot but I didn't have much control over.

Just as things were getting to a boiling point and I was busting on the inside a very kind person just offered to get involved and B"H has settled most of the issues pretty simply.

I hope you don't mind me posting here but I love this thread!

It is so wholesome...

Makes me appreciate the small things.

Thank you Hashem for letting me appreciate the little things in my life!

I am actually surprised this thread hasn't become more popular.

So I encourage you to use this thread and post the positive things that happen to you in your day to day life.

We always have the little things we take for granted that I can thank for, but I think in my current situation I would still like to thank for the above story (sorry I didn't share any more details).

I still feel that "relieved" feeling from that issue mostly dissipating so I would like to continue the thanking to Hashem for that.

OK I deleted what I was going to write as it would not have been received well.

It was about my life which is very low and how I walking around with a lot of "complaints" on Hashem it was just too animated so I deleted it..

The issue is that I've semi given up and since I'm so upset... I just let myself do whatever I feel like...

A HUGE (seriously big) Thank You to Hashem!!

Last night something amazing happened that I've been waiting for, for years.

I'm davening and begging Hashem that other issues that I'm facing should get "magically" removed like this one seems to be heading.

Thank you hashem for making me see that things can change even after years of waiting. I hope I also get to that day. Really happy for you. Lots of hatzlacha

Another good thing happened yesterday that I didn't think will proceed as quickly the way it did.

No tangible results (yet) but even what did happen is very positive and promising.

Thank You Hashem
