

QUICK HELP WITH IPODS

If anyone can help me, I can very much use a quick answer:

My daughter's iPod stopped working. A relative wants to surprise her with a new one, and is asking which one to get. It seems that all iPods now allow you to watch videos (except for the iPod Shuffle, but that one doesn't allow you to choose which song you want). If at all possible, I would want her to get a model that is only audio capable. Any ideas (such as something offered by a competitor of Apple/iPod?).

If you want audio only, why not just get an MP3 player?

Thank you Guard and Bardichev. Does anyone know of any good brands - that allow you to choose which song you want to hear?

There's a Bardichev brand that only plays Bardichever Niggunim.

Wow, I'm glad I found this thread.

I'm a big fan of the Sandisk Sansa series.

The Clip probably makes the most sense for your daughter, although it has an FM tuner.

Any of these would be great:

Electronics recommendations are actually my specialty

Choose based on capacity, price, and color.

PM me if you have any questions.

Thank you, b'Ahava! Your SanDisk Sansa Clip suggestion may be the best option!

One question: I'm assuming that you can choose which song you want (unlike the iPod Shuffle, which doesn't have that capability). Is that correct?

Although i aint no professional i think you can. If it has any type of screen basically its telling you that you can choose the song you want.

Now my 13-year old son's 2 GB iPod died. He wants an iPod Classic, which (as far as I can tell) cannot access the Internet. My concern is that with 160 GB, it can be used to watch movies. On the other hand, if he were to use it for that, he knows it would be taken away.

He's not interested in the Sansa series. Ipod, after all, works much better with iTunes!

Any guidance would be greatly appreciated.

Yashar Koach!
