

Holy Yid's Continuing Journey

Posted by Holy Yid - 18 Dec 2009 01:17

Hi I am alive. I am past 90 days, through the Hand of God, so I am starting a new tread for myself and my friends.

I still don't accept that I am an addict or even if I am an addict I do not accept myself as a full fledged one. Because of that I do not always take all the precautions other people on this site take. I want to diverge for a second and say that I respect all those who do take those precautions I just like to believe that I can get away with less. Anyways I felt that I should be ???? in ?????? ?????? so I spent a week acting as though I was a fully addicted addict with almost zero resistance.

I was very careful about what I saw outside, when I used the web and what non Jewish stuff I looked at and so on. I discovered a shocking thing. That after the week I was calmer and felt more in control of my life.

Maybe I'll pretend to be an addict long term.

Holy Yid.

So did I. I am now, baruch hashem, on day 2 of a new streak. JIP gave me the advice to try going for a run to get rid of your stress. Most importantly, just remember that we have all fallen and now its time to bring ourselves back up. Let's work toward a day when we don't have to STRESS over our relationship with HaKadosh BaruchHu... because we will be clean, pure and holy yiddin.

We are medicating our stresses, anxieties, depressions, etc. with lust because thats the only way we know how to do it. Teach your mind and body next time to react in a different way. Say that next time you have stress you'll squeeze a stress ball. In the end they both accomplish the same thing right?

oh please, yid!

cut it out.

ok - lets out your life in terms of music - that seems to be the common topic in several threads, these days.

lets start with the basics -

how many notes are there?

7 right?

start at C - and keep climbing... eventually you will hit C again, right?

(if I am wrong I want you to tell me!!)

ok - so you are at C again, right?

so whats the difference?

its C, but at a higher octave.

keep up the music mystro..you are doign great!

Mazal tov to me I had a friend lock the internet on my cell phone. This has been a problem for me and I finally took care of it. I rationalized that I needed it because I read the chizuk emails on it but I was losing the battle so I finally admitted that it had to go. It took me a long time(weeks) to do this but now I am SOOOOOOOOOOOOOOOOOOOO happy that I did.

welcome to your journey to freedom!

no more being a slave to your technology!

my wife recently told me , that we've gone without a cell phone for long enough (unofficially I think I am one of three people in Israel that do not have a cell-phone. Did you know a key part of cell-phone technology was invented in Israel)

I asked my wife why we need one, and explained to her that I dont feel the need for one, since at the end of the day I already know she needs me to stop at the store and get some bread, milk and cheese.

(said of course with a smile on my face)
