Chevra get one these counters!

I've bought one, and it gives me an extra boost to keep my eyes down. Every time I want to pick up my eyes on the street, I click it instead. In the past, I've only felt the negative part, the upsetness when I picked up my eyes. Now, I am besimcha every time I reach my destination and I see how many times I didn't pick up my eyes on the street.

current thought patterns by using a counter, then that is a wonderful thing.

2. The YH has a hold on us because we feed it. We need to stop giving it bandwidth and just ignore it and it eventually go away. It may take a while, and it may take practice and effort, but the goal is to slowly stop listening to that voice in our head and just be "normal" and gain freedom from the YH.

To quote Mishpacha's interview with Mendy Worch about TYH's song Chi Chi Wawa: "What's behind it is related to a message that Rabbi Yossi Zakutinsky, Rav of K'hal Mevakshei Hashem in Lawrence, shared in one of his derashos in explaining what Chazal say about two ways of looking at the yetzer hara. He said that the challenges it throws our way can seem big, scary, and intimidating, or they can be viewed as just a tiny, annoying Chihuahua. If a Chihuahua barks at you, you don't feel intimidated because of its small size. You'd just kick it away and keep on going, or as Chazal say, schlep it along with you to the beis medrash. So the song is about that Chihuahua that you're not afraid of." <https://mishpacha.com/streamlined/>

I know this has come up earlier in this thread a number of times, but I am still lacking clarity on the following question: Should our goal be to constantly be "on alert" and "fighting" with the YH, or should our goal be to reach a state of "normalcy" where this YH no longer preoccupies us?

Hey welcome!

Great post. If you want to and feel comfortable, maybe start a thread and share a little about yourself?

In answer to your question, I'd say "yes".

You gotta do whatever works. Sometimes ignoring works, sometimes fighting works. It's almost impossible to be on edge fighting your whole life, and it's almost impossible for someone who ended up on this site to just ignore urges, be "normal" and not notice these things.

(Doesn't mean you need to be stressed and can't "laugh off" this "yetzer hara" (check out this lichtige post . (Okay it's three posts. Shoot me.))) In short, there's a time and place for both options you're presenting but for most people on the site, in this specific inyan, option 1 is probably more correct. Certainly in the beginning of the struggle.

For a person who hasn't struggled, getting fartracht about the delicious forbidden sights on the street or on the internet is a good way to start struggling.

What are you gonna do at the 10,000th click?

Here's an idea, every time you hit that number, buy a new one. After 120, an einikel will find a box full of clickers, each one at 9999...

It'll be the talk of the town.

with todays technology i converted the link image to text

here you go

I'm not one to usually write letters,

but I felt compelled to share this as perhaps it may provide Chizuk for others as well.

I've been working in the city for many years. Recently, I've been struggling in business like many others.

While taking the carpool one morning around Pesach time,

I noticed the person sitting next to me watching a video clip. I looked over his shoulder and found it quite interesting. I asked him where it was from and he introduced me to the organization Vayemaen.

Intrigued, I joined, and started getting the videos each day.

Around Pesach time, I received a video of Rabbi Sperling (I believe that's his name), where he spoke about keeping track of every time you are careful with Shmiras Einayim.

And he showed the image of a counter. The idea caught my eye.

As a Zchus for my business, I decided I was going to buy myself that counter and keep track whenever I had a Nisayon of Shmiras Einayim. Working in the city, I'm surrounded daily by Nisyonos, and I decided to gather as many opportunities as I could by looking away and looking down.

It's a few months now, and I have already counted 483 incidents in which I turned away. Some of them were extremely difficult, but I felt good every time I did. (I'm including a picture of the counter which I picked up for a couple dollars.)

guardyoureyes.com/media/kunena/attachments/28463/screenshot2024-09-10130054.jpg

But what I experienced following this private program of mine, was amazing.

There have been numerous clients and deals I've worked on for literally years, but I found myself at a standstill. It was beyond frustrating.

About two months ago, I had the first big breakthrough and a deal closed B"H with very little effort. And then another, and another. Interestingly, some of those with the same clients I've been working on for years, only this time, with very little effort. I felt as though a clogged pipe of Shefa was unclogged and as if Hashem was showing me that if I worked hard in Ruchniyus issues, other things would come easier. There's no other way to explain this.

I just want to say thank you to whoever is involved with this amazing production. The Zchusim you have is unmeasurable, and you will never know the extent of your work.

A regular Lakewood resident.

Hatzlacha.
