

Efshar Letaken's Corner

Posted by Efshar Letaken - 21 Feb 2010 05:07

---

Hi!

I would like to reintroduce myself to the GYE family.

Some of you might not know me since I was absent for a while. But I have spent many countless hours over here in the past & was one of the reasons I had to take leave for I spent way to much time here then I was able to afford.

But its important for me to stay in touch so that I don't forget to keep my guard up & also that I try to help another person in any way possible to break free is only fair.

So I set up this corner of mine that I will try to put up some of my older posts & also this way I can try to stick to my corner so that I keep the time I spend on GYE under some kind of balance.

To all the Holy Soldiers on this battle front I say

"Ashrecho Yisroel!"

You can't Win if you don't Play!

Hold on just a little bit longer and we will be free!

Efshar L'Taken!

---

=====

---

====

Re: Efshar Letaken's Corner

Posted by Efshar Letaken - 16 Sep 2010 21:17

---

To my star pupil,

I am writing this letter to let you know what I think of you. Up here in heaven things are not like they are down on Earth. Over there, people only know what they can see. If they see a person is "successful", they think that he is the greatest guy. When they see somebody struggling, they think he might be one of the weaker elements.

Let me tell you something. Hashem gives every person certain abilities that nobody knows about down where you live. Some people are capable of tremendous things, while others were put there for much smaller purposes.

Only Hashem in His infinite wisdom is able to give every person exactly what he needs, to reach his potential.

I am very misunderstood. Most people hate me, and I don't really blame them. Most people think that my job is to make sure that they fail in all aspects of Mitzvos, and that I rejoice every time they sin.

This is the furthest thing from the truth.

Did you ever watch a boxing coach train his student? It is really a funny sight. The coach will put on gloves, and fight against his student. At first, he won't hit him so hard, or throw his best punches. But, as the student gets better and better, the coach will start to fight him harder and harder. He does this so that the student will improve his skills, and become the best boxer he can be.

This is where it gets strange. Every time the coach knocks down the student, the student gets yelled at!! But finally, when the coach threw everything he has at his student, and not only does he withstand the beating, but he knocks the coach down, there is nobody in the world happier then the coach himself!

This is exactly how I feel. If you fail right away, and don't even try to fight back, I see that there is not much talent to work with, and so I take it easy on you. But if you get back up swinging, I realize that I may have a real winner here, and so I start to intensify the beating. With every level that you go up, I increase the intensity of the fight. If you finally deal me a blow that knocks me out, I will get up and embrace you and rejoice with your success.

Sometimes my job is very disappointing I see a person with a lot of potential and I start right in on him. He fights back for a while, but when the fight gets too tough, he quits and just remains on whatever level he was on. (And he usually ends up going down!)

I feel like yelling at him, "Get up you fool! Do you have any idea how much more you could be accomplishing?!" But I am not allowed to do so. I just leave him alone, and go try to find another promising candidate. If I have chosen you to be the target of my more fierce battles, it was not for no reason! You have tremendous abilities!

You were born into a very special family, you have Rabbeim & friends who really care about you, and parents who would help you grow in Torah and Mitzvos.

You are a very respectful and kind person.

I am writing to you now, because I have a very serious request to ask of you. Please don't stop fighting! Don't give up! I have been beating too many people lately, and I am losing patience,

Believe in yourself, because I would not be involved with you as much as I am if I didn't think you could beat me. Know what your strengths are!

A great Rabbi once said: "Woe is to he who doesn't know his weaknesses. But, 'Oy Vavoy' (even greater tragedy) to him who doesn't know his strengths - for he will not have anything with which to fight."

Always remember one thing: you have a secret weapon at your disposal. I shouldn't really be telling you - but I will anyway. Hashem himself is watching our "training" sessions very closely. I'm pleased to inform you that He's rooting for you! If things should ever get tough, almost too tough to bear, just call out to Him with a prayer, and He will immediately come to your aid. I wish you the best of luck, and I hope that after 120 years when your time is up in that world of falsehood, you will come up here to the world of truth, where I will be waiting for you with open arms, to congratulate you on your victory, and personally escort you to your place next to the Kisey HaKavod.

Sincerely, and with great admiration I remain,

Your Yetzer Hara

=====
=====

Re: Efshar Letaken's Corner
Posted by 7yipol - 17 Sep 2010 09:55

---

WOW, WOW and WOW!

BROUGHT TEARS TO MY EYES AS WELL AS TO MY HEART.

Gevaldig

=====
=====

Re: Efshar Letaken's Corner
Posted by Efshar Letaken - 17 Sep 2010 12:19

---

Thanks Mom,

Miss you guys tons!

Send my regards to the family.

May you all have a Gmar Chasima Tova! & A Gut Gebenched Yur!

=====
=====

Re: Efshar Letaken's Corner
Posted by Me3 - 17 Sep 2010 12:39

---

Look at that I was just wondering what ever happened to Efshar Letakain and here he comes.

Gmar Chasima Tova

PS Left the Rebbe without his Gabbai?

Guess you were needed today to handle all the kvitlach

=====
=====

Re: Efshar Letaken's Corner
Posted by Efshar Letaken - 17 Sep 2010 14:39

---

Yup Me3,

You hit the nail on the head!

Keep up your sense of humor and have a year of Simcha.

=====
=====