

some days are better than others

Posted by ToAdd - 10 Aug 2010 10:13

---

I guess I'm just venting or looking for some friendly words.

I've made it to 65 days!

For Rosh Chodesh, I decided to up the stakes and this has my Y"H stepping up his game too.

I decided that I'm going to stop all fantasizing but this seems to only have made them more vivid.

I feel like I'm getting closer to falling than before.

Some times it seems like I never even had a problem, and other times I'm so close to falling.

ToAdd

=====

Re: some days are better than others

Posted by Yosef Hatzadik - 10 Aug 2010 16:45

---

ToAdd wrote on 10 Aug 2010 10:13:

I guess I'm just venting or looking for some friendly words.

;D

Does it have to be friendly words? Or is a friendly smile enough?

;D

=====

Re: some days are better than others
Posted by ToAdd - 11 Aug 2010 05:40

---

=====

Re: some days are better than others
Posted by Yosef Hatzadik - 11 Aug 2010 16:29

---

ToAdd wrote on 11 Aug 2010 05:40:

Your friendly smile made me smile
The knowledge that I made you smile makes me smile too!

;D

Have a Happy Elul!!!

=====
=====

Re: some days are better than others
Posted by ToAdd - 12 Aug 2010 06:01

---

Now that post made me laugh!

Thank you.

Starting the day with a shofar blast and a laugh is great.

Even the word Elul and what it stands for is a reason to be very happy.

A big thanks to everyone that has helped me get here, this is going to be a very special Rosh Hashanah.

Have a great day and a happy Elul.

=====
=====

Re: some days are better than others
Posted by Yosef Hatzadik - 12 Aug 2010 18:31

---

In Novardok, they to used to great each other on Yom Kippor with a HUGE smile and a hearty "Gut Yom Tov!"

=====
=====