

IS THE FORUM DYING? / ARE WE AWAKE?

Posted by Holy Yid - 21 Oct 2010 19:41

It seems that in general people are posting much less then they used to.

Do you think this is true?

If yes is it a good thing or bad thing?

For those who can benefit from a more active forum how can we change that?

here is my tzvei un a halb cents why i used to be active and "unfortunately" am hardly able to)

used to be on the forum much more during those dark days when I needed it most, and I'm absolutely convinced, that the mere fact that I'm a member here of this holy group, is itself a most powerful "segula" in maintaining holiness and purity!!!!

My house thank G-d is internet free and I cut off the internet access on my Blackberry, which leaves me access to the internet only in my office which is not conducive to posting.

the main thing is..... post or no post my heart and neshama and my prayers is here with each and everyone of u holy warriors

Chazak CHazak Chazak

With fiery love to all

Noorah the smallest of the house of Amram

Let's stop talking so much, we should all kick ourselves in the ... And get working, each member should realize in which section he likes to help out fellow stragglers, I for one like to check the "introduce yourself" section & try to greet everyone and follow up, some of u might like the break free or the WOH , or the talmidi chachmim here should hang in the beis hamedrash, we can't rely on other members and think the old members will post, we all gota work, me too should buckle up and help, chesed is what keeps us alive in this gulas, & there is a very big zchus to help a yid get closer to hashem

Looking forward for a blast of posts starting this coming sunday

Gut shabbos all u GYE'ers

I'm curious what you mean. I don't recall doing this. Perhaps you can find an example in the old chizuk e-mails and show me? I honestly would love to be accomidating, and if there's a certain ;D

I guess, here is the difference I'm trying to get at:

For me, I think the chizzuk E-mails used to feel EMOTIONAL. The nitty gritty of someone's struggle, and how he was feeling about things.

Lately, I think they seem more INFORMATIONAL. Someone's insight, or vort, or handy dandy tip.

I don't feel they have that same emotional pull as they used to.
style of e-mails that the oilam likes, I can try and get Eye to do it for us

Does that make sense?

--Eye.
