Guard, I actually thought you meant that if you never got involved with this site and forum (meaning, if you weren't Guard but rather whatever your name is), you would be spiritually dead like the rest of us.

Wow, now that's deep.... That must be what I meant. Thank you Momo, I just love you!! (I keep getting more and more impressed with how deep my words are, and I had no idea. Like I said, without Guard I'd be nothing)

Ok, here's a hint to what I truly meant (well, at least I thought of this now): Ask Bardichev to pronounce Guard.

(Sorry if you can't read that. Hints have to be small).

Excuse you. Just because some here don't talk like normal NY-ers is nothing to be ashamed of.

I lost my NY (normal) accent ~10 years after moving south and have been talking funny ever since.... 8)

Oh, and I love Guard, too.

A man paces back and forth across his bedroom floor.

His wife sits watching

she sees that he's sore.

"We have to do something",

he says suddenly.

"I can't bear to see the pain anymore.

We need to act quickly."

"Something must be done, to help the yidden out there.

For they are suffering something terrible, they're tearing out their hair."

"This illness has reached our community, and it just cannot be ignored.

What can we do to help,
through his brilliant mind he pored."

Suddenly he smiled
as an idea came to his mind.
We'll make a website,Rebbetzin.
We're going online.

Day and night he worked,
info from everywhere he took.
He thought of ideas,
and opened the big book.

Finally he was ready,
the day had come.
A website with advice,link,
and a thriving forum.

The site grew and grew
the members increased.
And you might've thought,
his involvement would cease.

But he's there every day,

no matter how tired.

He reads everything, puts thoughts to inspire.

He's funny and sensitive,

and committed to the end.

He's saved countless people, marriages helped mend.

But he won't reveeal who is,

I geuss that's okay,

cause if I knew who he was

I'd probably be at his house every day.
