Succa Topic 1: Identifying the Yetzer Hara
Posted by Ykv_schwartz - 11 Aug 2009 08:29

_____

As promised, I am starting the topics from messeches succa. I hope to explain some of the concepts about the yezer hara, as explained by our Rabbis. Please read the succa thread here, to gain proper familiarity with the sections. I do not have a clear vision how I am laying it all yet, so please have patience. Comments will be greatly appreciated. I do want to warn the reader, that while I hope to bring inspiring thoughts, my focus is not that. I am just trying to penetrate the truth. Though, if you have any stories or vortlech that relate to anything I speak about, by all means share.

I think it is important to comment here that I am not trying to prove anything. I am just relating a sugya as I understand it and continue to learn it. I am trying to remain as objective as possible. My sole purpose is just to understand an intriguing sugya, as I gain greater clarity the words of our holy Rabbis.

I think we are ready to go.

===
====

Re: Succa Topic 1: Identifying the Yetzer Hara
Posted by Pintele Yid - 19 Aug 2009 23:59

_____

Reb Yakov,

Thank you so much for this unbelievable Yesodosdika Shiur. I can't wait for the next installment.

I don't know if you will address it, but I also learned that the Y"H is a Shliach of Hashem and really wants us to beat him for Hashem's sake.

There was a moshul that I learned in Tanya Shiur. There was once a king that wanted to test out the morals of his son the future king and sent a Zoina to him to entice him. Not only did the king want him to succeed, the Zoina also wanted him to succeed in the test because she was a loyal servant of Hashem.

Pintele Yid

===
====

Re: Succa Topic 1: Identifying the Yetzer Hara
Posted by Efshar Letaken - 10 Apr 2011 19:19

_____

I just wanted to bring this thread to the top since I feel that its contents can be very helpful the others as it was for me.

Njoy

E.L.

===
====