

My way - Think about G-D

Posted by anonymousBT - 25 Jul 2011 21:25

- 1) I'm a BT, but this is relevant to you even if you're an FFB. I basically have the mind of an FFB now - I know so many so closely I know that's right - and so I'm going to use this eitzah myself - starting tonight.
- 2) This is not about the internet, but it is applicable to taivas nashim (or others) bichlal.
- 3) I was 24 and had been becoming frum for a few years already when I went to a Lubavitch (BT) yeshiva.
- 4) Like all Lubav bochrin I went out to do mitzva tefillin, i.e. putting tefillin on men in the street, shops etc., every Friday afternoon. My route was all around Ben Yehuda Street, ie. the Times Square of Jerusalem. I don't think I need to explain what was there for me to look at, especially in the summer time when school/college was out for the holidays.
- 5) I SWEAR to you that as a single, red-blooded man (having previously thought about, looked and done all the things you would expect of a young irreligious man) I did not look at or think about anything I should not have, the whole time I was there! Every Friday! Not only that, but I didn't even find it a challenge.
- 6) Even when I came back to my home town, still as a young single man, and took the train to work every day, it was the same story. There was nothing to look at, and there was no challenge. I swear.
- 6) Q: How did I do it?
- 7) A: All I thought about was G-D and Torah.
- 8) It sounds simple, but it took me years of learning Chassidus to get there.
- 9) So the answer to this, for me and I hope for you, is to think about G-D and get to know him by learning Chassidus.

=====

Re: My way - Think about G-D

Posted by laagvokeles - 25 Jul 2011 21:32

anonymousBT wrote on 25 Jul 2011 21:25:

9) So the answer to this, for me and I hope for you, is to think about G-D and get to know him by learning Chassidus.

OH YEA!

ill do it! ill learn chasidut breslav! ;D

=====

Re: My way - Think about G-D
Posted by lo yichra - 25 Jul 2011 21:45

not davka breslav

=====

Re: My way - Think about G-D
Posted by tehlimzugger - 16 Aug 2011 21:40

breslov isn't bad if you know how to balance it so pass the maharan, man 8)

=====

Re: My way - Think about G-D
Posted by lo yichra - 17 Aug 2011 19:30

right, but most breslever don't know how to balance it,

& it's really hard to.

=====

Re: My way - Think about G-D

Posted by tehillimzugger - 18 Aug 2011 08:12

idk if we should b talking 'bout anyone since bris halasoin is mechuva neged bris hama'oir

=====
=====

Re: My way - Think about G-D

Posted by lo yichra - 18 Aug 2011 13:06

i'm not talking personally from someone so that's not called loshon hora.

=====
=====

Re: My way - Think about G-D

Posted by tehillimzugger - 18 Aug 2011 13:08

hey we'rre at a tie! now i also have 27 posts lol ;D

whatever love every jew

=====
=====

Re: My way - Think about G-D

Posted by lo yichra - 18 Aug 2011 14:16

i'm with U,

as long he is not a ????????

i love him.

=====
=====

Re: My way - Think about G-D

Posted by tehillimzugger - 18 Aug 2011 14:44

u have 28 now lol

soon we'll both have reached much more and no one's gonna have a musag what we're talkin' about

RAT
it's not fair

ROCK AND TRUCK

=====

=====

Re: My way - Think about G-D

Posted by lo yichra - 18 Aug 2011 15:12

=====

=====

Re: My way - Think about G-D

Posted by tehillimzugger - 18 Aug 2011 18:18

=====

=====

Re: My way - Think about G-D

Posted by lo yichra - 18 Aug 2011 20:22

first of all it's not ?? ???? it's ?? ????,

but anyway i don't have time to say more then 5 kapitel thilim every day.

=====

=====

but U have to say 1 kapitel more

Re: My way - Think about G-D

Posted by kidushashem - 23 Aug 2011 12:01

anonymousBT wrote on 25 Jul 2011 21:25:

- 1) I'm a BT, but this is relevant to you even if you're an FFB. I basically have the mind of an FFB now - I know so many so closely I know that's right - and so I'm going to use this eitza myself - starting tonight.
- 2) This is not about the internet, but it is applicable to taivas nashim (or others) bichlal.
- 3) I was 24 and had been becoming frum for a few years already when I went to a Lubavitch (BT) yeshiva.
- 4) Like all Lubav bochrin I went out to do mitvza tefillin, i.e. putting tefillin on men in the street, shops etc., every Friday afternoon. My route was all around Ben Yehuda Street, ie. the Times Square of Jerusalem. I don't think I need to explain what was there for me to look at, especially in the summer time when school/college was out for the holidays.
- 5) I SWEAR to you that as a single, red-blooded man (having previously thought about, looked and done all the things you would expect of a young irreligious man) I did not look at or think about anything I should not have, the whole time I was there! Every Friday! Not only that, but I didn't even find it a challenge.
- 6) Even when I came back to my home town, still as a young single man, and took the train to work every day, it was the same story. There was nothing to look at, and there was no challenge. I swear.
- 6) Q: How did I do it?
- 7) A: All I thought about was G-D and Torah.
- 8) It sounds simple, but it took me years of learning Chassidus to get there.
- 9) So the answer to this, for me and I hope for you, is to think about G-D and get to know him by learning Chassidus.

anonymous,

I'm kind of Chabad and went to one of the lubo yeshivas for a while. I remember also that when I went on Mivtzayim, it wasn't hard to have Shemiras Einayim b.c my whole mindset was a selfless, ahavas Yisrael mindset.

you doing Haftzas Hama'yonos?

I wonder how many lubos are on here?

=====

Re: My way - Think about G-D

Posted by YairA - 13 Nov 2011 04:20

Thinking about Hashem all day is the way to go. Garden of Emuna by Rabbi Shalom Arush translated by Rabbi Lazar Brody. Changed my life. Ausome Sefer. Highly reccomended.

=====