Not to piss a nice guy off further, but your hachloto back in April lasted two days. Being horrible at keeping any hachlotos, myself, I am not about to criticize!

I am just trying to point out one thing:

You describe an incredible consistency when it comes to using lust. Acting out with lust seems to go through periods of daily or weekly consistency for you and you have stuck to it for years, apparently. I did the same. Whence the consistency?

Obviously we have a real problem that is bigger than we are, and it isn't going to just go away.

The steps are about accepting that this issue is bigger than we are and choosing to give up the fight when we see our track record. I do not know if you should be doing this, but some of your posts pretty closely describe my attitude in active addiction. Who the hell am I to know if you or any other person that myself is powerless and unmanageable?

I am a nobody, of course, and can only know myself, if I'm lucky. So all I am interested in doing with this post to you is point out something you may have missed.

I know how you feel. My birthday last year was exactly the same... I felt like trash because I hadn't kicked the habit. Well, tomorrow is my birthday and I'm now over 120 days clean so it can happen. Just stick around and work hard.
