

Right Brained- all the way.

Posted by tehylimzugger - 24 Aug 2011 18:49

TehylimZugger wrote on 24 Aug 2011 15:50:

you're right.

i would share positive things i'm doing if they would be noigeia to the oilam here. being that they're not and i risk being recognized if i put in too many details [i think i did already] i won't.

I decided to ask the chevra's advice about the root of my problem, there's bound to be someone that can help.

I have always been addicted to Information. Information was my best friend and I would run after her whenever I got the chance. As a kid sports and games didn't really appeal to me, it seemed as just a way to pass time, while being with Information made me feel like i was gaining. I was taking Information out of books and putting her into my brain, and I felt my brain growing as a result.

Being that Information and I were such good friends, I would never make decisions without first consulting with My Information. When I got to Yeshiva I discovered that most of my friends were not looking at it as an opportunity to get to know Information, rather as a hurdle that needs to be passed. What happened was that my friends who were in yeshiva "to survive", behaved more or less the way they were ~~supposed~~ expected to, while I spent the time with Information. Now the yeshiva couldn't throw me out for spending my time with sefarim, but they didn't appreciate my whole "affair" with Information, it detracted from their "system", and being that I always squeezed some Information about what the yeshiva was learning too, i was okay.

hold on a second- i'm not a loner, as a matter of fact i'm one of the most popular guys in my yeshiva, but i always saw myself as "above" "time-wasting" because of my intimate relationship with Information.

I'm always building new homes for my dear friend Information with the help of my other good friends Leshoin Chachamim and Eit Sofer and my [extremely] right brained personality is always getting me busy with different projects. The problem with all this is that I dedicate all my time to these inanimate friends while not leaving any time for my human friends. I do spend time with my human friends, but i don't attribute them the same importance as to my inanimate friends.

How can I balance my deep emotional needs for relationships with people and society, with my imagination's need to be with my brain, nurture it and speak with it?

=====
=====

Re: Right Brained- all the way.
Posted by gibbor120 - 11 Jan 2012 18:10

I took it again trying to be as honest as possible and got a 35.

=====
=====

Re: Right Brained- all the way.
Posted by Gevura Shebyesod - 11 Jan 2012 21:35

37!!!!!!

(That's the sefira day of Gevura Shebyesod!!!!!!)

=====
=====

Re: Right Brained- all the way.
Posted by gibbor120 - 11 Jan 2012 22:15

Gevura ShebYesod wrote on 11 Jan 2012 21:35:

37!!!!!!

(That's the sefira day of Gevura Shebyesod!!!!!!)

=====
=====

Re: Right Brained- all the way.
Posted by Gevura Shebyesod - 12 Jan 2012 00:35

Just once. And I probably should have scored even higher, but i tried to keep my answers conservative. ~~Wow Cool~~ ok, how many times did you take the test until it came to exactly 37?

There are no coincidences. Ever.

i just saw this. On a paper towel!

"Learn from yesterday, live for today, hope for tomorrow."

=====
=====

Re: Right Brained- all the way.
Posted by tehylimzugger - 12 Jan 2012 13:01

why r u guys taking that ridiculous test ???

i stopped after question #31

=====
=====

Re: Right Brained- all the way.
Posted by gibbor120 - 12 Jan 2012 15:54

TehillimZugger wrote on 12 Jan 2012 13:01:

why r u guys taking that ridiculous test ???

i stopped after question #31

=====
====

Re: Right Brained- all the way.

Posted by NeuroYair - 22 Jan 2012 02:12

It pays to be a Tehillim Zugger! I just finished reading through the info about "fours" and while there are some things that don't necessarily apply, for the most part I guess you were right. The most compelling part was:

To be "ordinary" becomes a frightening prospect, since a sense of "being unique" feels like one of the only stable building blocks of their identity.

Why did it take you 31 questions to decide that it was ridiculous?

Their disconnect from their parents also produces a longing for the "good parent"—the person who will see them as they truly are and validate the self they are trying to construct. Fours usually experience this as a longing for an ideal mate or partner. They will often project this role onto new acquaintances, idealizing them and fantasizing about the wonderful life they will have together. Unfortunately, as Fours get to know the person better, they become disenchanted, realizing that the other is not the "good parent" who will rescue them from all their problems. He or she is just another human being with flaws and shortcomings.

CONTINUED....

Problems with Hostility and Despair

Like Twos and Threes, the other two personality types of the Feeling Center, Fours have a problem with hostility. They direct their hostility at themselves because like the Twos and Threes, Fours have rejected their real self in favor of an idealized self-image. However, because of their self-awareness, Fours are always becoming conscious of all of the ways in which they are not like their idealized self. They come to disdain many of their real qualities which they see as barriers to becoming the self of their imagination. Angry with themselves for being defective, Fours inhibit and punish themselves in the many ways which we will see.

I see that if used correctly this personality trait can bring out the best change in life. I'm still a little skeptical, though to the idea that we are all a bunch of categories and as I said in a previous thread, I feel like it compromises our bechira, but I'll try to look into this further either way.....Thanks Zuggs! 8)

=====
=====

Re: Right Brained- all the way.
Posted by tehylimzuggger - 23 Jan 2012 11:21

hey! i was officially nicknamed TZ

=====
=====