Rey. Mr. Em, I noticed that you mis-spelled the title of your thread. Shouldn't it be "GUARDen"?

okay

I'm gonna try to make this a Honest Journal

I'm sorta clean for 14 days,

but today is day number one of being super clean.

I wrote myself a shtar saying that if I go on nonworkrelatedinternet (NWRI) at all over the next two days (besides for GYE and NHL.com) then $50 goes to Reb Meir.

Baruch Hashem today was good (i didn't really do anything productive but I kept my tnai, If I keep it tomorrow i get three free days , shabboss, sunday and I have monday off, I plan to watch 3 programs on tuesday, but that will be written into the shtar for next week, sort of a release valve.

Bless us all O Lord withn thy great strength and everlasting Love or as RS"C ZT"L prayed "LORD MAKE ME HIGH"

Hi.

15+ years?

Hard for me to imagine at this point.

What I don't understand is that if you have gotten to this amazing point, why are you still here? And not only here, but here so much (you're an administrator). Do you still struggle with this, or are you here totally out of chessed to your brothers in need? I mean, after 15 years (or 5?) doesn't a person get to the point where he can move on and spend his time in other ways? Or is shmiras eynayim/bris ALWAYS a challenge that will never go away? How discouraging.

I'm sure you're refering to Dov.

I was wondering the same thing, but after reading here i'm sure the answer is going to be "once an addict always an addict"

But i would love to see what Dov answers.

Thanks for being honest.

I'll also be honest. I'll say it straight. If you will not be productive you will be setting yourself up to fall again. (yeah, I've been there done that etc.)

tell me all about it!

south park is now blocked,

but do you think if I give it a little release once a week I'll screw up again? or should I go th whole 9 yards.

BTW I'm still keeping my tnai, only 1.5 hours till I leave for shubbis ang et 3 free days!

I havn't really done anything worthwhile, but I'm feeling pretty accomplished today for simply staying off that stuff and doing what I said i'll do,

The Leafs lost so I'm a bit down, but now I'm busy reading a bunch of old stuff on GYE (LORD boy can I arbrenng a sach tzeit oif GYE bitte helf mich in alle yidden s'zol zein a toieles in a nachas riach far dir!)
