

The Ramblings of a Recovering Lunatic (General)

Posted by MendelZ - 08 Aug 2013 23:22

FYI: There is another version of this post in the Balleh Battim forum that has more about how this all relates to intimacy with the wife.

First time poisting anything of a personal nature. Yes, I am interested in comments and questions. It will help me and others (I hope). Here it goes...

I never believed Chazal when they said starving it will satisfy it. It just didn't seem possible. How can you go without that feeling of release, of goodness? Not having it wasn't an option for me. No matter what I tried, I could never stay off of porn and masturbation for an extended period of time (expect a few times where I did a couple months without) because I just didn't believe I could live without it.

Over the past four months (approximately), I have noticed a big shift in my understanding of this whole business. Yes, the longer one holds off from lustful thinking and acting out, the easier it gets. Big chiddush: Chazal were right. But the concept was not real to me until I saw it in action in my own experience. (This is important: One need to see the truth for himself. We cannot force insight into another person.) By not focusing on me and by staying clean for a little while more than is comfortable, I see how real it is to "starve" in order to be "satisfied". We don't really need sex. (And B"H, my wife and I are currently in a month of self-imposed no sex and only once did I feel a little regretful. Not being chained to sex is such a freeing feeling, like taking off handcuffs.)

I still have plenty of work to do with my "addiction". But I want to point out that the main thing that helps me is seeing in real time that I DON'T NEED SEX. NOTHING WILL HAPPEN TO ME IF I DON'T GIVE IN.

It all started with filters and keeping busy and living in the moment and finding meaning in my life (still need to do all those things all the time)...but the realization that it is possible to say "no" and that every "no" is bringing me to less and less dependency was HUGE. Saying "no" to lustful thoughts and feelings is really saying "yes" to the Aibishter. Its saying, "Yes. Hashem, I do want You to be real in my life. I want to let You help me."

I heard from my Rebbe that the reason we have trouble giving up the things that we know are taking us away from Hashem is because we really don't believe that what He can offer us is more pleasurable. The ice cream looks and tastes really real and sweet right now on my tongue. I can rely on that ice cream. It never fails me when I need something fulfilling. Ever. Even though its only a few seconds worth, but it is real and trustworthy. I can take the sweetness and geshmak of porn and masturbation to the bank, any hour of the day, any day of the week. So we don't give what Hashem has to offer us a chance. Especially for those of us who got caught in this addiction at an early age before we could really stop from taking over our lives. It is hard to imagine that the goodness of Hashem can compete with porn and masturbating. Can real life really be better than that mind-blowing sensation of release?

Recently, I had a "nisayon". For me that means taking a shower while feeling depressed. Bad idea. Really bad idea. But I figured I would try it out and see if anything would be different. Stupid idea. Really, really, really stupid idea.

Baruch Hashem, I didn't fall. Some lustful thoughts surfaced but, thank G-d, the shower was uneventful. What helped me in the moment was the above ideas. The play-by-play went something like this:

First I thought, "If I say no to this, it will just get worse and harder to contend with. Give in now so that it won't be a constant struggle." So that was a tiny blip on the radar, a faint, muffled lie that could easily destroy me.

Then I thought, "Say no to acting out right now in this moment because each moment is a moment far zich. One moment at a time. If you want to act out later, that will be an eisek for then but the fact that it will get more difficult if you say "no" doesn't matter. So you will have to worry about it then."

Then the next thought(s) came along: "Hashem will take care of you if you say "no". Starve and be satisfied. He can give you what you need to be strong in a moment from now, just as He is giving you what you need to say "no" in this moment. Hashem CAN give you something better. Just trust Him."

That was it. Home free. The desire/need to masturbate dissipated (for those moments). And I realized that saying "no" (with the right attitude behind it) is saying "YES".

If I recognize Him as my strength, He will be with me. He is found where we let Him in. (Kotzk! Kotzk! Yaaaaaaay, Kotzk!)

Please RBSHO, save me from complacency. Help me remember Who is the source of my strength. Give me gratitude and humility, always.

These are the ramblings of a recovering lunatic. Please take them with a grain or two of salt. And if any of the above was helpful or you relate to any of it, please let me know in the comments. It will give me chizuk. Thanks.

=====

Re: The Ramblings of a Recovering Lunatic (General)
Posted by MendelZ - 30 Jan 2014 22:24

kilochalal wrote:

thanks

working on it and hope to get there some day

=====

Re: The Ramblings of a Recovering Lunatic (General)
Posted by kilochalal - 31 Jan 2014 04:43

there are innumerable madreigos of v'asu lli mikdash veshachanti besochol shel kol echad v'echad

i.e. how much we let Hashem into our lives

a neverending avoda bh

=====
=====

Re: The Ramblings of a Recovering Lunatic (General)
Posted by MendelZ - 30 Jul 2014 03:16

Hi everybody, old and new.

Stopping by to collect well wishes on an official 365 days clean on the GYE chart thingie.
Thanks to Hashem, Guard and GYE, the chevra, etc.

Wishing everyone all the best and hatzlacha in finding our path to freedom.

=====
=====

Re: The Ramblings of a Recovering Lunatic (General)
Posted by ineedchizuk - 30 Jul 2014 03:50

Mazel tov!

x120!

=====
=====

Re: The Ramblings of a Recovering Lunatic (General)
Posted by skeptical - 30 Jul 2014 04:51

MAZEL TOV!!!

Keep it up!

=====
=====

Re: The Ramblings of a Recovering Lunatic (General)

Posted by cordnoy - 30 Jul 2014 05:34

that's nice!

great news!

halevay vayter...continued nachas.

thanks for stoppin' by; don't be a stranger...you always have a lot to add.

b'hatzlachah

=====

====

Re: The Ramblings of a Recovering Lunatic (General)

Posted by Gevura Shebyesod - 30 Jul 2014 05:55

WOOOOOOOOOOOOOOHHOOOOOOOOOOOOOO!!!!!!!!!!!!!!

=====

====

Re: The Ramblings of a Recovering Lunatic (General)

Posted by ZemirosShabbos - 30 Jul 2014 18:17

Mazel tov! wonderful!

KUTGW

=====

=====

Re: The Ramblings of a Recovering Lunatic (General)

Posted by gibbor120 - 30 Jul 2014 18:23

MAZAL TOV!

=====

=====

Re: The Ramblings of a Recovering Lunatic (General)

Posted by Pidaini - 30 Jul 2014 18:55

May we all continue to grow together, meichayil el chuyil!!

=====

=====

Re: The Ramblings of a Recovering Lunatic (General)

Posted by MendelZ - 26 Aug 2014 03:38

I don't have much to say but I feel like I'm missing out on the action. Seems like everyone's always posting and saying stuff. Just wanted to say hi and reconnect here, al kol panim with a short and empty hello post. Hope everyone is well. A gitten chodesh, too.

=====

=====

Re: The Ramblings of a Recovering Lunatic (General)

Posted by dms1234 - 26 Aug 2014 04:16

See? I told you it wouldn't make you post the whole long thing of how you did it!!!

HEYYYYYYYYYYYYYY

=====

Re: The Ramblings of a Recovering Lunatic (General)

Posted by cordnoy - 26 Aug 2014 05:36

Why don't you join continuously join the action? And stop sleeping (zzzz)?
Mendel doesn't sleep, he's workin' the tools, that's why he's where he is....one day at a time 400 or so times!

b'hatzlachah

Besides, you can't really sleep any longer; football season is almost here.

=====

Re: The Ramblings of a Recovering Lunatic (General)

Posted by Pidaini - 26 Aug 2014 10:25

HI Mendel!!!

Looooooooooooooooooooong time no speak!!!!!!

How ya doin?

How you treating life?

Say something in my thread, it'll get you back into things very quickly, I'm sure!!

Oh, and KOT!!

=====

=====