

The Cost of Tea in China

Posted by charlie1 - 18 Jun 2014 18:18

The interent is amazing - so much information - so much going on - I could learn so much.

I would check to see the weather in china. The financial situation in Paris. The level of the kinnert, The tips for a good sex life (real scientific investigation) the sex aids etc etc etc then BANG FALL.

It would get me everything "just a little medical research" then BANG FALL

Research how to grow tomatoesthe BANG FALL!!!

Get the pattern.

It is OK not to know the weather in Germany or how to harvest wind power in the antartic
-NOTHING WILL HAPPEN!!

A person should be curious of informationand the world around them - but ask a friend - that builds coversation, interaction closeness freindship - the Internet is cutting of from the world not connecting to the world. It causes distance rather than connection.

Enjoy the real people around us.

I am a sex addict. Being a sex addict has forced me to connect to the real me, forced me to find myself. I could not have done this without the 12 steps. It was built my interior, I now feel strong Through Hashem. not artifial ego - of "I can beat this with just a little more determination.

Charlie1

=====
=====

Re: The Cost of Tea in China
Posted by Pidaini - 18 Jun 2014 23:00

WOW!!

You seem to really be doing great!!!

You wrote somewhere else that we should tell everyone to go to 12 steps, just wanted to voice something that has been spoken about here.

Most people do not like being convinced of things, and when one tries convincing me, the more skeptical I get about it. When trying to show someone else what has helped, we need to remember not to push it upon them, we are not in control of them.

Most of the time we are really well meaning, thinking "Poor guy, he's hurting himself so bad, and I know just the right thing for him!!" But the stark reality is, we can't force him to do anything!!

In meetings and on the phone we share our experience, we never tell the other person what to do. We don't give advice, if they want to follow what worked for us, then they are more than welcome to, but pushing them will only push them further away!!

Just speaking from experience, seriously!!

=====
=====

Re: The Cost of Tea in China
Posted by Machshovo Tova - 18 Jun 2014 23:46

And also, not everyone needs the 12 steps. There are people who suffered for many decades from what seemed to be an addiction to lust, and at GYE they found tools that helped them stay sober and live normal lives.

Just speaking from experience...

Hatzlacha

MT

=====
=====

Re: The Cost of Tea in China
Posted by charlie1 - 23 Jun 2014 16:34

fully understood

?????

=====
=====