

Is the struggle different for 35 year olds compare

Posted by charlie1 - 30 Jul 2014 14:39

I remember being young and spending hours and hours a day with an erection with multiple mast a day. I was almost perpetually in a state of sexual arousal. Now at the age of 35 I find that I bearyl get an erection (except for several minutes during sexual intercourse. I am however spending hours and hours in my head space planning and planning and planning how?who ?when?Where I could get a "hit" The actual physical act if so much less important - it is as if I would have the same thrill even if there was no physical contact - This is scarey since I have no external way to control my addiction =like locking the booze cabinet - since my thought are always there - I can not block them out.

thoughts?

Charlie1

=====

Re: Is the struggle different for 35 year olds compare

Posted by cordnoy - 30 Jul 2014 18:06

I'm older than you and I have no problems with both.

Regardin' thoughts, it is the mindset of sobriety and recovery that wins over the lustful thoughts of fantasy.

Try it!

b'hatzlachah

=====

Re: Is the struggle different for 35 year olds compare

Posted by Machshovo Tova - 30 Jul 2014 18:55

I am older than older and I still have issues with fantasies trying to invade my brains. I thank Hashem for keeping me in the game and allowing me to still be involved in this holy journey. But we need to realize that the only reason Hashem sends us these nisyonos is cuz it's our mission to ignore them. And so we just need to keep on truckin' as they say. Main thing for me (an for those who relate) is to accept that this is my situation, and to make the best of it.

When Harav Meir Shapiro zt"l (founder of Daf Yomi) was on his deathbed, he had his talmidim dance and sing. When they noticed his matzav was getting worse, they were getting concerned. R' Meir couldn't talk anymore, but he motioned for someone to bring a pen and paper. And with his last kochos he wrote 2 words: "Rak besimcha" (only with simcha/happiness).

So no matter how old you are, and no matter whether you think your life is slipping away, "Rock beSimcha" (yeah, "rock" with simcha).

As Reb Nachman teaches us in his famous piece: ?????? ?????? ??????

I will sing to Hashem with whatever little amount of righteousness I still have.

??? ??? ????? ???

The glass is never all empty, so just concentrate on your good parts and keep on improving.

[Thank you for listening. I needed that.]

Hatzlacha

MT

=====
=====

Re: Is the struggle different for 35 year olds compare
Posted by ineedchizuk - 30 Jul 2014 19:55

(So did I, MT. Thanks!)

=====

=====