

need this more then ever

Hey

I joined this site a few days ago hoping this would be the time I changed my life for real. I have been addicted to porn for as long as I can remember although finally admitting that I was has been a more recent development. I am still getting used to the idea that something has been able to grab such a hold on my life and I have such a hard time letting go. I am married almost 3 years and i have a 1 and a half year old son. Until recently I though that porn wasn't effecting my marriage and that I could still be a loving husband and watch porn but I have finally accepted that such a thing isn't possible. I have been acting cold towards my wife and she thinks its her fault when its completely my own fault. i am ready to break free and I am hoping with the support of the other amazing people on this site I will finally turn my life around and have a better relationship with my wife and kid and be a better person. In the very short amount of time I have been on this site I already feel better knowing I am not alone and I have a place to speak freely about something that can potentially ruin my marriage and my life. Thank you all so much just for being here and making this site possible you are all changing my life for the better.

i have also been suffering with similar resentment my wife didn't understand intimacy when i got married and when i realized she had a real problem i lost it and slipped right into porn witch was one year ago although girls were always a problem and still is but as i gain from this it got much easier to come to acceptance that she needs help and that i can start helping her instead of wallowing in resentment and being upset at my in-laws although s/t is very wrong with them

i realized now that to accept your wife is loving her and not the fuzzy feeling you feel inside but rather the acceptance she feels much hatslocho and gut shabbos

Try to jumpstart intimacy with little notes, poems, cards lying around with the constant message that you love, appreciate, and enjoy the company of your wife. These are things every wife needs to hear.

Intimacy is a wonderful matzav that every adult should be able to experience. The peace of mind and happy emotional state it puts one into lasts way way beyond the actual physical actions of intimacy. Invest in it and iyh you will reap the benefits. Wishing you all success.

In your first post you mentioned that you now realize that it is completely your fault and not hers.
I commend you on that.

I feel your pain of what you are goin' thru.

There are those who preach abstinence in situations similar to yours. It is based upon the logic that you need to curb your lust and work on yourself.

I do not offer such advice, not because I don't agree with it, but rather, because I know its difficulties, and it seems to me that unlessl one is working with a strong sponsor or mentor, the chances of him listenin' to that suggestion is highly remote.

But, what I would suggest, and this is what people told me, do not focus on jumpstartin' the intimacy. Your wife is in a tough situation right now. She is dealin' with a lot. Your/my own past/present behaviors do not help the predicament at alll. Hintin' at intimacy now might not be conducive for her to be responsive.

I'm not against cards, flowers, chocolates and more, but perhaps now is not the right time.

If I misread the situation, or there is better advice out there, don't hesitate to take it.

In the mikvah thread, you can read where people told this to me. I wasn't always the most receptive, but it was advice that worked.
