I read that thread on kol bechatzros. It isn't very important to know who is right. I suggest that if you do respond do so for the fun of it and just sit back and enjoy the feedback, whether positive or negative. It isn't like you are a Rav and you are giving a halachic ruling. All of it is just chatter about what happened. If you see that it is triggering and it causes urges I think you should stop posting there.

If my opinion matters at all, this seems like a pretty twisted, manipulative, patronizing and paternalistic way to get chassidish people to be comfortable to get involved here.

Beny i dont now what theese big words meen like manipilve petrinzing and penerillipstick so i went to google it an see what it meens and found also terrible other things popped up like shmitzige pop ups and cuased me big yeridahs (pm me fur what i saw) and now i cant geting it out of mi mind so pleeze next time stick to plane english hear.

Shalom Brother

What have you tried so far? What has or hasn't worked in the past?

I found it deeply meaningful to say a brief tefillah every time I averted my eyes.

I say the Yehi Ratzon for shemiras einayim every day after minyan before I start my day.

When walking, I try to look at the pavement - zukt advises Rav Avigdor Miller (have you read any of the shemiras einayim booklets?)

You can practice not looking around even when there is no nisayon - like in shul.

I keep a picture of my family and Rebbe with me, looking at them if I need chizzuk.

If there is a prolonged nisayon, I repeat to myself Shivisi Hashem L'negdi Samid and I imagine Hashem and all the holy neshamos in shomayim are watching to see what I'll do. I even think as if my own neshama is watching. When it is the time to look back on it all, I want to 'smile' as I watch those grueling victories and sing and dance with joy.

Wishing you Hatzlacha

Hi babayakob,

See in my signature a link to a thread "Tips for Shmiras Einayim", there are some posts there that you may find helpful.

I love your posts on the forums BTW...

Sounds like you've got some trauma of fish zaft & mikva... might be worth seeing a serapist for that....
