Hi I'm 23,

I'm in yeshiva and I work and i feel like I'm so alone in the world. I try every week to stop,stop for a few day install filters on my phone etc. and then just end up failing.

I feel like I need to stop before I get married but not sure that will ever happen.

Welcome aboard to the warmest family in Klal Yisroel. What a smart and brave move it was to put yourself out there on these forums. There are amazing mentors and friends you can make here. Reach out. Start with Harav HHM, send him an email @ michelgelner@gmail.com. He will reply with a number to call him at. He is an amazing person. He will understand you.

Hatzlacha Raba and please keep us posted.

You have come to the right place. I have progressed a lot since I joined. I watch my eyes and don't get triggered. I've also partnered with others for support to not give into the urges. After reading the material you'll be able to stop masterbating. Reach out and make some true friends

Ashrecha!

Hiding your identity is very normal.

Take it One Day At A Time. Try not to think about "how will I stay clean for a week, let alone the rest of my life" focus on staying clean each day at a time. We can only control the present.

Life is so much more rewarding and fulfilling without being lust ridden. Yes i miss the perception of how I wanted it to make me feel, but i remember how it actually makes me feel. Living a double life is really tough.

I hate loneliness too, something that helps is try to think about what you are doing to make yourself a better husband and father. This doesn't make loneliness go away but it helps a bit.

Keep on Trucking, One Day At A Time!!
