

Back in the game

After being on this site on and off for 6 or 7 years without any long term success, I finally bit the bullet and went to see a therapist. There are not really any good options for Jewish therapists where I live so I went to a non-Jewish one, but he helped me really dive deep on myself and understand my own behaviors. I now understand myself SO much better and all of the things I was trying to avoid feeling by turning to pornography, and my own behavior finally makes sense to me.

?a big area of growth for me was also understanding that change does not require perfection. It's actually more about being able to get back up when you falls I thought I knew this before but I now feel this in a whole new way.

I think I'm now ready to try again and start using the tools here to really lock in and make lasting change.
