

my story, any chizuk appreciated

Posted by aryehtahor - 22 Jan 2010 16:49

I feel that the time is overdue for me to write my story to someone and try to get as much help as possible.

First, I should emphasize that I did not grow up in a religious house or part of a religious community at all. I have only recently become a Baal Teshuva.

I was introduced to pornography magazines at a young age, perhaps 10. I had a friend who had movie channels that showed smut late at night and we would watch together when I would sleep over. When people started to have internet at home, I remember going over to another friend's house to look together from time to time. But it didn't become an addiction until later, although when I cannot say. In fact, my inability to remember most of the development of this highly destructive habit is astounding. It is as if all those hours I spent looking at pornography went into a black hole and got deleted from my memory and consciousness. How do I know it happened? Because today I am struggling more than ever to stop my addiction to internet pornography.

About 3 years ago, my loneliness and obsession with lust and frustration at not being able to "pick up" someone overcame me and I had an involvement with a prostitute. This experience was totally revolting to me and I am ashamed to this day. After that I had a girlfriend but I continued looking at pornography and regarding her as an object. As a result, our sexual relations were anything but intimate for me. They were filled with numbness and frustration. It was a strange situation of feeling a strong need for having relations but during the actual act, not feeling any emotion or real pleasure. This must have been the effect of the pornography on my mind.

I should also add that this girlfriend enjoyed deviant sexual practices, some involving violence. There was one instance, which I am even more ashamed of than the prostitute and which I haven't told anyone in the world until now, that occurred that I think is also related to the pornography and the concept of women as objects. I was angry at this girlfriend for some trivial reason and the deviant sexual practice and my raw anger crossed wires in my mind and somehow made me believe that it was OK to be violent towards her. I don't know if, in my perverted mind, I thought she would enjoy being assaulted physically, or if I thought it was all some sort of sexual drama, but I hurt her physically. This has to have been the absolute low-point in my life. You must understand that this was totally antithetical to all my beliefs and natural instincts, and completely uncharacteristic of me and of the environment I come from. I just need to get it off my chest, because it's hard to bear the secret alone. We continued to be together for another 2 years before breaking up. No violence ever occurred again between us.

Before being exposed to Judaism, I sensed that pornography was destructive and that I needed to stop but I lacked the strength and determination. I knew that it was disgusting, anti-social, and that it was an addiction that would wreck my future family. I have improved a lot B'H with the help of a Rabbi and the Torah that I've studied, but I still have lapses and get sucked in. Sometimes 2 or 3 or 4 hours go by and I am stuck to the computer destroying my mind and my soul. Even if you forget all the spiritual damage, what a waste of time! However, whereas I used to masturbate very frequently, I have sworn off it and have stopped completely with only 2 lapses in the last 6 months. But it's not enough. My goal is: no pornography and no masturbation. I firmly believe that the only way to really control the yetzer hara is through learning Torah. Hashem created the Yetzer Hara and He created Torah as the antidote. All the terrible things we do can be for the good if we do sincere Teshuva, make a Cheshbon with ourselves, and resolve to never do these things again AND KEEP OUR WORD.

=====

Re: my story, any chizuk appreciated
Posted by silentbattle - 25 Jan 2010 11:46

Check out the thread, and see if it helps.

=====

Re: my story, any chizuk appreciated
Posted by aryehtahor - 25 Jan 2010 12:28

Wow, unbelievable thread. Yeah that definitely puts some things in perspective. Next time I think I'm going to look at p I will read about who I'm looking at first. It's all so corrupt and disgusting and horrible, I just don't want anything to do with it. Also, when I was looking for a prostitute and I called up some women, probably the most revolting thing was just interacting with such low-lives and seeing how they treated me, the potential customer. Suffice to say it's a whole world of misery, certainly not a place for nice Yidden like us. When we surf the internet for p, we are tacitly involving ourselves in that world.

=====

Re: my story, any chizuk appreciated

Posted by Nat - 25 Jan 2010 14:50

Boruch Haboh!

Welcome to our family!

What works for me in that situation is not only davening for that other person but recognising that its possible that Hashem placed this in front of me so that I could pray for them.

The 2 basic ideas that work for m in that situation are ,

1. Recognising that I have lost it completely and only hashem can help me now I must give myself to him 100 percent.
2. I focus on helping other people either in their struggles with addiction or in any way possible, I just need to get rid of my crazy ego.
3. Getting on to Gye and telling people or my mentor how I feel, and trying to be empathetic with others in their struggles.

For me I must focus on doing it 100 percent for the other person and to give my life 100 percent into hashems hands.

Whats sort of crazy is that my impetus is self centered since I know that if I don't do so I will get pulled down myself completely and eventually harm other people and myself

(To insanity and beyond)

Yet I have to focus completely on the other person and Hashem, I guess for me things don't have to make sense if they work. ;D

If these tools don't work maybe you can be involved in sa slaa etc, they have success for alot of people and their system truly works. Trust me most of my ideas are from them ;D

Never feel to embarrassed etc to post here, we never judge and whenever you are willing we are hear to offer our experience strength and most important hope with you!

=====
=====

Re: my story, any chizuk appreciated
Posted by aryehtahor - 25 Jan 2010 16:48

Nice to meet you Nat.

I think I'm not at a stage where I need to go to sa meetings. It seems to me that the best way forward for me is to practice what you say about davening for people, and being active in this forum. Especially the forum. This is such a great group and the ideal use for the internet. When I think I'm going to slip, I'm going to post something here.

And when I think I'm ready, I'm going to take on the 90 day challenge! So far, my best stretch was around 30 days. So maybe I'm not so far off. And I used to smoke cigarettes which I have stopped now for a month and a half. Yes! I know that I am getting siata dshamaya and it feels great. I am knocking off things on my list of basic self-improvement. The next thing would be eating better and exercising, but one thing at a time...

=====
=====

Re: my story, any chizuk appreciated
Posted by aryehtahor - 25 Jan 2010 16:56

Oh, and just to clarify, I know this isn't just basic self-improvement. The main point is that these are steps toward serving Hashem better and building olam haba and doing mitzvos! And I also think the ability to beat addictions and override Y'H transfers to whatever it is you need to do. It helps you have a better work ethic, eat better, exercise, stop smoking, whatever it is will be easier the more control you gain over yourself and your yetzer hara. I think I heard of R Yerucham saying that he would deny himself something he wanted every day just to help build up the muscle of self-control. So the stronger the muscle, the greater heights we can reach and the better we can serve Hashem.

Anyway, that might have been a bit disorganized, but maybe you get the point...

=====
=====

Re: my story, any chizuk appreciated

Posted by silentbattle - 25 Jan 2010 17:40

When I started, I never dreamed that I could do this... if you've already been clean for 30 days, then you can totally kick this habit.

Reb Aryeh - ~~/life is all about self-improvement.~~

Sign up on the WOH, and get to it, being clean and pure one day at a time!

=====
=====

Re: my story, any chizuk appreciated

Posted by Dov - 25 Jan 2010 22:50

Understand and agree with all, just a little funny twist on the idea, from inside AA circles. They say how funny it is that 12 steps is referred to as "self-improvement" or "self-help" in the bookstores. It's really the opposite of self-help - which is how we got screwed up in the first place, of course. It's about G-d-help, meaning learning how to accept the unadorned truth about ourselves, accept His help in place of our ineptness, start to take directions, and really get better for a change.

Just a thought. Alei v'hatzlach, chevra!

=====
=====

Re: my story, any chizuk appreciated

Posted by penitent - 26 Jan 2010 20:09

I am pretty new and have committed myself (not to an asylum, just GYE) to being better in regards to Pn and self pleasure. So far 40 days clean. It has to be a mindset. Your story reminded me of how I used to feel , wanting to incorporate what I saw in those movies and clips, into my life. But it has no place in the bedroom. It's all fake. My connection that I feel with my wife and with Hashem is better.

Shlomo hamelch said , " Ani Koheles-- everything is Havel" The key is and was , that Shlomo Hamelech tried it all and had it all. Take it from him. We all know the same to be true. Cut the computer time and use it only when you have to. Make yourself busy and don't let the Y"H get any time to spend with you. Stay strong.

Penitent

=====

Re: my story, any chizuk appreciated
Posted by Dov - 26 Jan 2010 21:42

penitent wrote on 26 Jan 2010 20:09:

I am pretty new and have committed myself (not to an asylum, just GYE) to being better in regards to Pn and self pleasure. Stay strong.

Penitent

Great post, Penitent! Funny how you mention "self pleasure", and I definitely relate to what you wrote. But it's funny how we work, because it became clear to me especially after a year or so in sobriety, that I was never more miserable than when I was acting out. It's actually quite shocking how miserable I really am when in that state. Thank-G-d I no longer have to be there today.

Keep posting, please!

=====

Re: my story, any chizuk appreciated
Posted by aryehtahor - 26 Jan 2010 22:37

Dear Penitent,

Yes, I think it is very easy to confuse fantasy and reality. First, we know it's fantasy but we want to go there for a while and delude ourselves a bit for the fun of it. But later, we start to think that pornography is an accurate representation of what a physical relationship with a woman is. We get more pleasure for porn than real-life, so we try to bring porn into the bedroom as you said. At one point, the girlfriend that I mentioned in my first post actually suggested that she do things to me while I look at porn. How sick is that? Porn had literally invaded and obliterated any intimacy that could have existed between us. And what made things worse is that she was under many of the same delusions as I was and had very low self-esteem. I stuck with her way longer than I should have...

=====

=====

Re: my story, any chizuk appreciated
Posted by silentbattle - 27 Jan 2010 15:44

Whether or not she was unhealthy isn't the issue here - as Bards says, she may have a problem, but she isn't your problem. Or she may not have a problem. Doesn't matter anymore. The question is for you...what do YOU need to do to grow?

=====

=====

Re: my story, any chizuk appreciated
Posted by aryehtahor - 27 Jan 2010 16:07

Definitely agree with that. One of the things I can do though is to make sure I stay away from people like that in future, since it's especially dangerous for me with my tendencies.

=====

=====

Re: my story, any chizuk appreciated
Posted by silentbattle - 27 Jan 2010 16:15

You want someone who's healthy, and it sounds like even aside from her preferences in the bedroom, this women had a lot of issues. Although keep in mind that there's nothing wrong with doing things that are "different," or non-vanilla. The question is where it's coming from, and whether you're mentally with your wife at the time, or locked into your own fantasy world.

=====

=====

Re: my story, any chizuk appreciated
Posted by the.guard - 27 Jan 2010 20:38

aryehtahor wrote on 24 Jan 2010 05:26:

I happen to be in an environment in which I see very non-tznius women literally everywhere. This state of affairs will only be another year but until then there isn't really anything I can do about it except...not look. When I leave this environment, my need for pornography goes way down. The things I see during the day affect me when I'm on my own. But not looking is really hard. Any tips on that? It's kind of like being really hungry and knowing that in the next room are all sorts of delicacies that you love that are there for you but you don't even go to see what they are, let alone eat any...

Read through this page, top to bottom. Maybe it can help somewhat.

Which leads to the other problem which is that I have time on my hands. Even when I'm busy and I have a whole list of things to accomplish in the day and I am very methodical in doing them, I am glad to be able to relax at the end and...indulge in some internet surfing. But when I don't have a lot that I have to do, my laziness prevents me from getting up and being creative in finding something useful to do, and the internet is always there beckoning. And I've had filters but I always beat them so they are more or less useless at this point. And if I have time on my hands and I get sucked in...as I said, that could kill the whole day, or at least hours and hours.

Maybe some of the hundreds of links and ideas in our Kosher Isle can help.

=====