Listen, you seem far enough gone that you need the medicine you aren't willing to take. But there are approaches that do not require group meetings. At least try one of those (you can ask me for more details) or I will be pretty sure you don't want to change

See this:

www.guardureyes.com/GUE/PDFs/ebooks/Reah%20Chaim.pdf

The main relevant "system" starts at page 11, but its worth (IMHO) reading the whole thing.

A specific person to report back to with your successes and failures greatly enhances the effectiveness of the system.

You want him to blunt your teeth, and tell you that as things are at the moment, he but not you Tell you about the Erev Rav who preferred the comfort of Mitzrayim and did not want to leave?

Well. You cannot start the steps until you actually stop and want to stay stopped.

Such is my understanding.

Oh, as for the Chazaka that you established... I'd love to hear your word of the day.

Alternatively, you could answer a question - why do men wash Mayim achronim, but not women? Surely the documented reason of "salt on the fingers" applies to both? And women have to wash before bread. And women have the halacha of bentching, even a short version...

Why does the sheano yodaya leshol get the same answer as the rosha because if he sees everything going on at the seder and doesn't have the sense to ask, something is wrong. Vhamaven yoven.
