

Over the counter medicine.

Posted by R76 - 18 Oct 2013 21:17

I am currently taking

-- Licorice Root (480 mg) -- 2 to 3 capsules per day.

-- Valerian Root -- 4 capsules a day

Does anyone have any other suggestions.

My only suggestion is to not take any medicines or supplements unless it is under the supervision and guidance of a medical/mental professional (which I am not).

My doctor told me that it is OK.

So then I would suggest you direct the rest of your questions on this topic to him (or her), including dosages, the reason why you are taking the meds, and any additional meds that you might add to your regimen.

I can't figure out why you would ask these kinds of questions to a bunch of anonymous guys on an internet forum.

Having bronchitis, I have visited my doctor and he gave me a green light.

Licorice and Valerian do really work. But then I am 37 years old.

Believe it or not, as I am taking these medicines, staying away from m. is much easier then I thought.

The drawer in my table which contained adult magazines a year ago now contains Licorice Root.

I never had trouble with the magazines in the drawer; it were those out of the drawer that I struggled with.

Welcome back!

I had many magazines I bought over the counter -- now they all are gone. The same drawer contains Licorice Root. I hope to obtain menthol as well.

I found kosher menthol crystals for $25/lb. How much can I take per day?

I used to alternate magazines every three or four days; then I'd start again.

Never weighed them though.

Now I take 6 capsules per day.

I do commit sin but less then before. I have been free from that sin about 5 months.
