

glasses that make it hard to see

Posted by madechai - 10 Aug 2017 19:09

I live in NYC and it's starting to look pretty disgusting out here. I have the idea to wear glasses that make it hard to see. Has anybody tried this? what else is good for avoiding looking around too much?

=====

=====

Re: glasses that make it hard to see

Posted by yxorwa - 11 Aug 2017 18:50

Well, the opposite can be helpful, but I guess it doesn't apply to you. If you already wear glasses, then just take them off when in public. I don't do this enough (and I have to be more careful about where I'm going) but it can help.

If, as I assume, you don't usually wear glasses--- I don't know, maybe something like that could help. ???

=====

=====

Re: glasses that make it hard to see

Posted by madechai - 11 Aug 2017 19:31

I actually have a sort of solution. I was frustrated and couldn't wait to find some so I did some research and bought some very dark sunglasses on ebay. Someone said in a review that they could barely see through them, which is perfect for me, so long as I can see where I'm walking. If they don't cover enough of my vision, i will use a marker to make them darker. Since they are already dark to begin with, it won't be noticeable. I have no problem being the weirdo who wears sunglasses so long as I get some protection from the outside world.

=====

=====

Re: glasses that make it hard to see
Posted by Trouble - 11 Aug 2017 20:08

Personally I prefer the type where you can't see at all thru them.

Which explains why I got arrested for groping.

=====

=====

Re: glasses that make it hard to see
Posted by madechai - 11 Aug 2017 20:44

I get it. it's a bit crazy but I don't care anymore. tired of seeing the garbage.

=====

=====

Re: glasses that make it hard to see
Posted by dont give up - 12 Aug 2017 22:44

Wouldn't it be cool to be free from this crazy obsession from within. To have the ability to just move on when seeing a beautiful women - in a very serene, loving and respectful manner??

Well, hey, there's a solution that works

=====

=====

Re: glasses that make it hard to see
Posted by Markz - 13 Aug 2017 02:20

madechai wrote on 11 Aug 2017 19:31:

I actually have a sort of solution. I was frustrated and couldn't wait to find some so I did some research and bought some very dark sunglasses on ebay. Someone said in a review that they could barely see through them, which is perfect for me, so long as I can see where I'm walking. If they don't cover enough of my vision, i will use a marker to make them darker. Since they are already dark to begin with, it won't be noticeable. I have no problem being the weirdo who wears sunglasses so long as I get some protection from the outside world.

As for the previous post, it's good that you can't see well without your glasses. gam zeh letovah

=====

Re: glasses that make it hard to see
Posted by bb0212 - 15 Aug 2017 04:12

madechai wrote on 10 Aug 2017 19:09:

I live in NYC and it's starting to look pretty disgusting out here. I have the idea to wear glasses that make it hard to see. Has anybody tried this? what else is good for avoiding looking around too much?

If you're going for glasses, what about getting a pair with a very high prescription? It'll distort your vision and give you a headache if you try to look through it.

I wonder if eBay sells glasses that cover ones vision when shopping online

=====