Good point - if we have something in america, perhaps we should follow the same rules? In a way, I'd want to be as open as possible, but I agree that I might have trouble being as open afterward. And even if I didn't, other people might. And maybe Guard can even work out a guest speaker for us.

I'll follow whatever decision you make...

I think it might work if it's done from the very beginning, like at the U.S. kumsitzim.

But in the Holy Land, we've already had 2 so I don't know how fair that is.

Gosh, I thought one of the best parts of these gatherings is to allow people to meet their friends from the forum. As for anonymity, no real names are being used.

Ok i see i missed out alot of discussion. To be honest ii can hear up what R Shlachter is saying. As for you momo, theres no disadvantage. Why? Because you dont have to reveal to the new person who are either.

But i do want to say this. I think im talking for everyone who has attended so far. So feel free to disagree if you feel different. I think that allowing ourselves to open up to eachother, actually made things alot easier. As for ex. now when i give chizuk to someone like eye.nonymous or momo, i feel like im talking to a real person. I also feel that they feel that the chizuk is much more genuine. we feel that its coming from someone who really knows us, cares for us, and only wants the best for us. Although this may seem weird, i think those of us who have experieced this know exactly what im talking about. we also feel so much more comfortable sitting with eachother knowing and keeping up to date with eachothers progress. I dont think it would of had the positive affect that it did, if i wouldnt of been able to be perfectly honest with everyone there. Even leeting the olam know my real name made me feel so much more at ease.

Anyways my two cents. Ive went through it and this is my feelings on the subject.

I fully agree with momo and it25. Although i haven't been writing much lately about myself, although i should. I'm too busy reading other people's posts and that's already enough to keep me afloat. Tonight i felt like i really wanted to act out, but i got so busy on the forum, that i don't feel like doing it so much anymore. Maybe i'll write soon a bit on my thread about it. But back to the point, meeting together has formed so much more of a keshar with the oilom and even feel freer to pm my day to day struggles or anything else to them. You feel like you're talking more to real people. But r' shlachter did raise a good point. I think kollel guy would be there! if we didn't know who he was, and other people could be also intimidated to come because of it.

I don't think I followed you on this point.

I'd like to apologize, even though it's not my fault.

I am listening to the second kumsitz. It's great, except for the drumming, which is me. Oh, I think the drumming itself was fine, but it somehow came out like cr on the tape. Very loud and tinny sounding. Basically, the drumming ruins the MP3 file and makes it inaudible.

IT25, either we have to work on the recording placement, or I'll leave my drum at home next time.

I got a private email with the link. I'll let IT25 to decide when to publicize it, if ever. (insert evil laugh here...)

Honestly, trying, I don't know what's so funny.

It's up to IT25 to send it to Guard, not me.
