Site Technical Issues

People have been posting about some technical difficulties they are experiencing on this site.

How about we put them here in this thread instead of in other people's threads?

So far we have:

1) People aren't getting email updates to threads they are subscribed to.

2) There are SMTP errors that show up at the top of the page after posting to a thread.

HOw do I stop the system from automatically updating me everytime there is a new post to any new thread that I happen to post into? I don't want to know everytime a new post is made to everything I ever commented on?

Go to your Profile, and find the "Subscriptions" tab. Mark whatever threads you wish to unsubscribe from, and at the bottom, using the "More" menu, select "Unsubscribe selected" and press "Go".

Yesodi

you mentioned my name

OTR was asking how to stop it from happening in the 1st place

Any ideas?

There does not seem to be a user-configurable way to do this. By default, the system auto-subscribes you to threads to which you have replied. Seems that one needs to explicitly unsubscribe if one wishes.

I think the "subscribe" system has to do with getting emails when there is a post in a particular thread. I am not aware of any way to control the "New replies" system on the site itself. Once you've posted on a thread, it will always show up in your new replies list.

This isn't really about the site but not sure where else to put it for the. Conference calls the number used for Canadian local is long distance which sort of defeats the purpose
