

Smartphones

Posted by Hashem Help Me - 07 May 2017 05:05

Hi. Looking for opinions on what I am writing here. Recently there has been a big push in my community that people should switch to "dumb phones" and if necessary have a tablet for email, etc. The purpose is to remove the constant attachment to internet. The reasoning is that the majority of people nowadays carry a phone all day, but do not need that same constant availability to the web. The accomplishment is twofold. One - for the owner of the phone, the nisayon has been moved another step away. Two - children see their parents less hooked on the phone in general and if they need to borrow the phone, it is not a sakana for them. Quite a large number of people have already made the switch and are very happy with the results. What does the oilam say?

=====

=====

Re: Smartphones

Posted by GrowStrong - 07 May 2017 07:10

Hashem Help Me wrote on 07 May 2017 05:05:

Hi. Looking for opinions on what I am writing here. Recently there has been a big push in my community that people should switch to "dumb phones" and if necessary have a tablet for email, etc. The purpose is to remove the constant attachment to internet. The reasoning is that the majority of people nowadays carry a phone all day, but do not need that same constant availability to the web. The accomplishment is twofold. One - for the owner of the phone, the nisayon has been moved another step away. Two - children see their parents less hooked on the phone in general and if they need to borrow the phone, it is not a sakana for them. Quite a large number of people have already made the switch and are very happy with the results. What does the oilam say?

Sounds like common sense.

As long as no one looks down at the baal habattim who need a smartphone.

=====

=====

Re: Smartphones

Posted by MayanHamisgaber - 07 May 2017 17:40

ditto

=====
=====

Re: Smartphones

Posted by Workingguy - 07 May 2017 19:12

Hashem Help Me wrote on 07 May 2017 05:05:

Hi. Looking for opinions on what I am writing here. Recently there has been a big push in my community that people should switch to "dumb phones" and if necessary have a tablet for email, etc. The purpose is to remove the constant attachment to internet. The reasoning is that the majority of people nowadays carry a phone all day, but do not need that same constant availability to the web. The accomplishment is twofold. One - for the owner of the phone, the nisayon has been moved another step away. Two - children see their parents less hooked on the phone in general and if they need to borrow the phone, it is not a sakana for them. Quite a large number of people have already made the switch and are very happy with the results. What does the oilam say?

Probably the biggest thing that my phone is Waze with real-time traffic. Why don't people do about that? Can you use the tablet with Waze and mount it?

=====
=====

Re: Smartphones

Posted by Hashem Help Me - 08 May 2017 00:03

Waze works on tablets

=====
=====

Re: Smartphones

Posted by eslaasos - 08 May 2017 18:55

Excellent idea. I have seen it be very productive for a few people.

I have a little practical experience so if you have any concerns or questions, please PM me as I may be able to help.

=====

Re: Smartphones

Posted by itstaken1 - 17 Sep 2017 13:03

talk n tech sells a phone with just email and waze.

in israel they just started seling waze devices with nothing else but waze.

=====