could someone have me in mind to be yotzei me when they daven shacharis?

To quote Rebbe Dov:

With all very due respect, I'll remind you that while you (and I) have been spending the past 20, 30, whatever, years (y-e-a-r-s) being focused on how well everybody else (including Hashem) is doing taking care of our needs - so much so that when we feel they are not doing a terrific enough job of it, we self-medicated by using lust and fantasy, etc. to fill in the gaps... So why do we expect real improvement on a deep level after a relatively short time? No guilt here, no blame here, at all. Only room for love here. But may Hashem help us both look at things with more realism and acceptance... Real improvement does take real time - and it is worth every minute. After all, we are in this for the "long haul"...

How do you/we know how Hashem wants you/us to daven to Him today? Maybe He "desires" the quiet pain of a davening that "seems it isn't what it should be"...

For me, the main thing is to stay in sobriety no matter what, and to pour our hearts out to Hashem in whatever way we can, as often as we can. The real improvement in the davening and avodah happens on its own, in my experience. Just don't make the mistake of dropping tefillos, if you can, nor of despairing, chas veshalom.

Tayara Uri,

Next time you don't feel like puttng on Tefilin for yourself, put it on instead for the Tinoikois Shenishbu, that don't have the knowledge of whatTefilin is.

Talking about Tinoikois Shenishbu, I don't know where I was to miss such an energetic thread ???
