SNAPPY'S BOWLChapter 1

Once upon a time, far far away, on the top of a mountain, there lived a family of birds. They were a happy little bunch who lived their lives hunting for worms, and keeping away from cats. The Birdy family had many young fledglings. The youngest Birdy was named Flyhigh. He was the baby of the family (so far) and all of the other birds pampered him with extra worms and shiny pieces of ribbon that they would pull off of Mrs. Mc'Odells hat while she was gardening on Sunday mornings.

Flyhigh was a small bird, but everyone had high hopes that he would go far. He was smart, and could smell a picnic all the way from the top of the old tree they called home. One day, while Mama bird was bathing in the lake, and Papa bird was out with the older birds gathering sticks to strengthen the nest after a branch fell on it, Flyhigh was flying around aimlessly, and noticed a very good looking piece of fish, sitting on Mrs. Mc'Odells back porch. By rights, the fish belonged to Snappy, the mean black cat who lived in Mrs. Mc'Odells house, but Snappy was snoozing and Flyhigh saw no reason that he shouldn't swing down for a minute and have some fresh tuna. Scanning the area from a birds eye view for potential dangers (or any of his brothers, who might tattle on him), Flyhigh dropped down on the porch, and started pecking away at the fish. It was good, But Flyhigh was a good little bird, and he remembered what his Mama told him about Snappy, so he only stayed for half a minute, and then flew off back home. Feeling guilty, he made sure to help out at home and be an extra good listener for his Mother.

The next day he went off to the porch again to see if there was any more tuna. Sure enough, there it was. This time he couldn't see Snappy but he figured that he was probably inside somewhere with Mrs. Mc'Odells. Today, the fish was better than ever. While Flyhigh was pecking away he suddenly saw a flash of black and felt the rush of air as Snappy came bounding up the stairs at his bowl and the bird intruder! Without a moment to spare, Flyhigh took off into the air, as Snappy stood there making all sorts of scary cat growls. His little heart beating fast, Flyhigh flew up as high as he could go until he began to get dizzy from the heights. After a bit, he flew back home and hardly ate any of his worm supper that Mama gave him. For one thing, he was full, and besides, he was feeling so guilty and upset at himself for doing something so stupid, just for a few moments of pleasure. That night Flyhigh slept fitfully, with dreams full of flying cats on brooms that said Mc'Odells on them. After Flyhigh was sleeping, Mrs. Birdy went for a fly with Mr. Birdy.

"I'm worried about Flyhigh," She said. "He's not acting his happy self recently, and tonight he barely ate supper!"

Mr. Birdy listened closely "give him time, "he answered quickly. "He's probably just going through a difficult stage"

"But you always say that about him!" his wife answered back. "You are too soft on him. I've heard that he's been hanging out by the Mc'Odells's house a lot recently. He needs a strong father figure!"

"So you want him to end up like poor Tweety?!" Mr. Birdy answered back. "You know what happened when his father was too hard on him, he ran away and got shot by a hunter! Is that better?!"

Mrs. Birdy was silent. What could she say. Tweety's death was a tragedy in the bird community, and everyone knew that Tweety's father was very strict with him. Perhaps her husband was right. She would give Flyhigh more time. Maybe if she gave him some more responsibilities, he would be too busy to get into trouble.

Trouble,

I never, ever know when you're serious. And maybe you had no choice and couldn't help it and it was beyond your free will-or maybe you could have not shmoozed with the woman or called and reached out to someone or diestracted or something.

But if what you're writing is that you went to a side room and had relations that sounds pretty troubling.

My second attempt.

Thanks for all the rifraf and bantering back and forth. Interesting that this thread is void of the "hey trouble, good going, your streak is inspiring to all, brush yourself off, you can do it," but whatever, it's fine by me.

Firstly, I chose this thread for my last story installment, for I value humor and interest over truth and accuracy.

Secondly, ????? ?? ???, I like to push the envelope (whatever the Hell that means). I like to put into print what you/me/others are thinking (well, maybe not all of us). I try to test the logic of some of our greatest thinkers and posters on this site and see if they hold up even when taken to the extreme. I mean and intend no harm. I don't know what I think or believe (unless I say so, of course).

Here are some of the mantras and one-liners that we are accustomed to here on this anonymous-name-quasi-rules-mostly orthodox (any religion)-12 steps flag waving/card carrying website: one day at a time; pick yourself up; Torah will save you; remove your glasses; thinking about your wife is lusting, no it's not, yes it is - it's the yetzer hara in all his glory; it's all barsherte/there was nothing you could have done; it's all one big test; it's not my fault (one of my favorites); this happening was a direct sign from Above; dreams are narishkeit, no, they're not, fantasies are, etc.

So, let's get back to our story and address some of the choshuve esteemed comments: doing the deed with a business associate is a terrible and grave sin and should not be joked about. Ok, we got that out of the way. Yes, we care if it happened and we must repent to the fullest (and you even merit to say the parenthesis in tefillas zakah - I always thought like rabbi Akiva, ??? ????? ????? ?????????). But, regarding sobriety: ultimately, what difference does it make if you spent two hours on your computer in your office closet watching p and m (did I do that right?) and spilled seed (can't believe I wrote that), or it was spilled right before dessert? The count (???? ????? ?????) must be reset. The bottom line is that for today, my job and focus is set. Will I need to read more pages from the giant book because the sin was more severe? (And I forgot to mention ????? ????? ?? ??????) Do I now need to work 18 steps? I still need to do the same thing. I must guard my eyes. I must work a recovery program. I must open to another sober, more experienced person. And I must ask and answer the questions in the daily renewal.

So, while I didn't quote and respond directly to all the heiliger posters above, I think I touched upon all the points.

Please forgive my attitude and tone. I am infatuated with lust. It engulfs me. No matter what I do, I'm no good without lust, And I can't get enough, Must be lust on my brain.

Trouble,

You're a gaon. Or a goon, not sure which.

Brilliant troublemaking that you did, and you pointed out that you didn't receive the same positive platitudes that everybody says and encourages everyone else.

So a word of honesty. Before I responded to your post, I thought about being positive and upbeat. And I decided that it made no sense to me. And that is because what you wrote is not completely true – it is not the same to sit in front of a computer and masturbate to pornography as it is to have sex with someone. Everyone is free to argue with me, but don't bother.

Maybe in recovery it's all the same, but it's really not from a Jewish perspective. Also, I think the audience on the forums is pretty astute as to how the selectively say what they do to each specific person. So a guy who many people might believe really believes everything else is someone else's fault probably won't get sympathetic and upbeat. Because people really know that this guys issue is that he has to realize that it's his fault. Only when he takes full responsibility could he then say it's not his fault. If you understand that last line

Gaon or goon; I take them both as compliments (the letter before the 'm' is a capital 'I') and I thank you.

Regarding your post, I agree, and that's fine.

It doesn't bother me at all.

I am what I am.

I care more about the toichen of the post.

Regarding the Jewish perspective, I believe I wrote the same thing in my last post. My focus was/is on recovery.

Just addressing one point.

I find that the attitude towards the challenge of lust is of prime importance. There are times when I have given up temporarily (for a decade or so, for a minute or so, who's to say, depends on the level) and that acceptance scares the hell out of me (hopefully).

I/We struggle with motivation at times. Saying I don't care that I fell may be sometimes true (really? I have no idea) but it's not something I like to see on the forum.

If it helps you to be honest, go for it but please decide if your purpose is primarily to have a funny post and secondarily to grope your way through the challenge of lust that is the purpose of this site, or the reverse before posting something others may find harmful.

Trouble,

I know you can read (since you read the sefer hagodel), so you know that the title of this thread is STORY TIME. It is primarily for fictional stories that can help us in our struggle. You knew this and still decided to post your story here. Therefore I'm going to assume that it is fiction, never happened, and was only posted to give a picture of what one would feel like if he actually went ahead with it.

This entire site is (mostly) dedicated to honestly working on our true experiences, therefore if you are not clear that this never happened then people are going to (rightly) assume that it is true. Similar to the author who goes into disguise to really 'feel' their 'bad guy' character. People are going to get upset at this author/character. He may get beat up, as he should since he is portraying to the world a flawed view.

If this was your actual experience however, then 1, I don't know why it's posted on a fictional story thread and 2, you would need to actually answer those who responded instead of (in essence) saying 'just kidding'

P.s. If your streak of three minutes or years is real - keep it up.

I'm sorry but I'm not following. Firstly, I explained what it is I care about and what it is I don't. Secondly, why would my attitude affect you? If there is something I am doing that is harmful for others, I will cease and desist.

Working backwards, I never said, "just kidding."

Why would someone get upset? I actually wrote twice at least that I put this in this thread as it didn't need to be true. Nobody ever asked me (i don't think), "did you do the deed?" If they would have asked, I would have responded in the negative.

Don't worry about me getting beat up; my user name is anonymous, and I'm ok.

What's with the flawed view? I presented a scenario and explained why one could feel that way. If you disagree, that's fine. I can be wrong on many things.

The discussion on my threads and posts have been very productive and interesting.

However, since there are elder statesmen here that seem to be saying that I am in the wrong and causing harm, I will lay low.

Don't worry please; I'll be ok.

Thanks

ANY HOW I DON’T LOOK DOWN UPON HER HOW SHE DRESSES BECAUSE I KNOW SHE IS THE BEST BEST BEST IN THE WORLD

OKAY SO WHAT HAPPENED THIS SHABBOS?

I CAUSED TROUBLE ,I BROKE A FEW RULES ,I WAS CAUGHT USING MOMMYS LAPTOP(SHE LET ME BUT SHE DIDN’T WANT TO TELL TATTY SO I TOOK THE HEAT ,ME AND MOMMY HAVE THIS DEAL YUP SHE IS COOL). I WAS ALSO CAUGHT WITH A BOOK I TOOK OUT OF THE LIBRARY (REBBI DOES NOT LET) BUT WHAT BROKE THE CAMELS BACK WAS MY COMMENTS..

I USUALLY KEEP MY THOUGHTS TO MYSELF BUT I DECIDED TO TEST THE WATERS AND BE A BIT “CHUTZPADIK”

HERE GOES BLOW FOR BLOW

TATTY: YANKELEH

ME: IGNORING
