Yeah, i agree.

I'm gonna go clean up my neighbor's cat from under my car, and just move on

How can you say that mistakes are not good or bad? They are not neutral.

I think there is an obvious difference between planned "mistakes" and past ones. We cannot say "I have a mistake scheduled for 8:00 when my wife goes out", but when we are looking back on last night, or even last hour, it's not helpful to start labeling the mistake/fall as good or bad, just as a mistake. Calling it good will disillusion us, and calling it bad will depress up. Neither of these emotions are helpful for recovery.

And what about recognizing it for what it is to do t'shuva?

I hope Hashem will give me the chance one day when I'm truly sober to really do proper teshuva. Untill then I am working on step one of teshuva which is azivas hacheit (stopping the sin). When I've learnt how to stop I can begin to work on charuta (regretting) and viduy (spelling out what i've done). But to do that now would be tovel im hasheret b'yodu (immersing in a mikva with the source of the impurity in one's hand. In this case an active lust problem).

The reason is because they do not want you to hear them. Why is that a quote?

The reason that It is referring to, is the fact that they are cowards or foolish. If someone is not bold enough to say it to your face, or not wise enough not to say it at all, they aren't going to get ahead of you in life in all of the ways that really matter. (Assuming that you are wiser and bolder)
