

Enjoy the rain

Posted by Twisted - 16 May 2024 15:04

I want to start working on this again.

But, I'm afraid.

I'm afraid of failing.

I'm afraid of being vulnerable.

I'm afraid of returning to counting days after being so vehemently against it—and I still am.

I'm afraid of being mocked after having such strong opinions and thinking that I figured it out. The latest thing I'm figuring out is that I haven't the foggiest. Yet I still speak passionately, as though the fog isn't as thick as the Palisades on a rainy night.

On the other hand, porn is killing me.

[Insert gif of the fat boy deciding between two cookies.]

So, I'll pick up my wanderer stick and attempt to place one foot in front of its predecessor.

Notes to self:

- Remember not to get dragged into the ego trip of GYEs Wall Of Honor.
- You're doing this for yourself. Don't expect accolades or acknowledgment from anyone. Including your wife. In fact, most importantly, your wife.
- Teach your tongue to say, "I don't know." Your mind already knows that, at least subconsciously, your communication needs to reflect that truth.
- Rocky is right; life hits harder than anyone. (Whoever that darn "life" guy is.)

Anything else?

Oh, yeah. I'm putting this in the "Just Having Fun" section to remind me not to take life so seriously (no matter how hard it hits).

"yeah I'm singing in the rain..."

Nothing more inspiring then seeing someone fall way down and still pick themselves back up!
Let's gooooooooooooooooooooo

And, yeah, none of us really know what we're talking about either (with some limited exceptions). We're all just enthusiastically sharing opinions. Because after all, what matters is doing not knowing. (This is just today's enthusiastic opinion, not a fact).

Twisted, a certain deep part of me is actually quite disappointed with this. I've always had it on the back of my mind, that when all else fails, to "embrace my inner darkness", (as you've once mentioned in conversation) and go the way of Twisted....

Now you're saying that is unmanageable too.

Bah Humbug.

To quote a recent powerful post from ilovehashem247:

i will keep on trying because i know that i have only two choices:

1. change
2. die

i don't want to die.

hope that made sense.

This post needs to be a t shirt or something.

I guess the message is that nothing is permanent.

Not the light, not the darkness, not "breaking free", etc.

It's best to enjoy whatever BS is on your plate at the moment.

Welcome to the first challenging day of my current trip.

I'll try to heed my advice and "enjoy the BS on my plate."

At the moment, my plate has a heaping dollop of sexual tension. The way my brain is used to enjoying this is via the good ol' porn route.

Let's see if I can enjoy the tension for what it is.

I shall let you know. Perhaps next week.

It may be easier to heed the advice if you blame it on someone else....

A: That's the way the cookie crumbles.

I have since discovered the delights of soft, chewy cookies.

They don't crumble as much.

But when they do crumble you often lose a whole chunk of the cookie, not just the little flakes from a hard cookie.

Not a metaphor. I just like cookies.

The deep end is where you realize you should've taken that left turn at Albuquerque....
