For those too shy to call my number, here's what my voicemail says

HI! You have reached Eerie. I'm sorry I can't answer the phone and give you a hug, so here's the next best thing. If you would like for me to call you back, it would be my utmost pleasure, so just press 1, and leave your phone number and the best time to send you a hug and I'll do my best to call you back within 10 months. If you are feeling ignored, please email chaim.oigen@gmail.com so he can commiserate. If you are feeling so ignored that you want to scream, press 2 to be connected to Redfaced. He just loves getting screamed at. Just beware he can scream pretty well, too. If you would like to leave a compliment of some sort, you probably have the wrong number, so just hang up. If this is a real emergency, hang up and dial 800-NEED-HHM. Or keep calling me. Eventually my willpower to ignore you will run out and I will be forced to answer. If you would like to get a free package of ~~popcorn~~ lingerie for the next hocking thread, press 9 to enter the raffle. Have a wonderful day! And don't forget, KEEP TRUCKING! beep...

That's better.

I'll take the popcorn any day...and YKW, I'll add you into the message if you want, like "If you are wondering what that blood is that's dripping down your neck, if you were driving while wearing a hat when it happened, press 5 before you become a zombie. If you already became a zombie, press 6 to reach YKW, who will direct the rest of your life. If you were dancing while this happened, check if Tzitzis Dude is next to you."

I have generally had an easy time with eerie picking up my calls and only recently got ignored. Since this was a new development for me I couldn't fall back on thoughts like "this problem started when you were so young, it's not your fault," and getting ignored by eerie was really weighing me down.

I have found much comfort the last few days reading everyone's open posts about their eerie struggles. I admire your vulnerability. I took a lot of your suggestions to heart, but neither TAPHSiC nor freezing myself into an ice cube and dropping myself into his Coke worked for me, personally. Though being in a frozen cube for so long was surely a ????? in other areas ?????????.

I actually have been trying a new method recently which has really helped me turn my life around: Ignoring eerie when he calls me back! I can't promise it will work for everyone, but I would definitely give it a try!

Had i known that so many people were suffering from this i would have opened this thread ages ago.

I love the pain emanating from these posts

Better than anyone frozen into an ice cube in anyone's cope on a charger made of anyone's ashes.

Ahhhhhh

I'm late to the party here but want to share an encouraging word.

I'm reminded of the time someone I had spoken to about his getting molested (truly a sad story) - he felt weird being the only one of his friends not masturbating and thought something was wrong with him.

I actually play a lot of phone tag with Eerie but never felt ignored. Am I the only one????????????????????????????????

I may need to resort to masturbation to calm that anxiety.....

It seems as though I am late to the party...again...whoopee

Please excuse my ignorance, it seems clear that I am missing something here...

The truth is that I am very nervous to share this so please remember that "They Say" that GYE is non-judgmental, accepting, warm(?), and all that stuff...

With great trepidation, I ask...

WHO IN THE WORLD IS EERIE???

And why would he ignore everyone's calls???

I must give a tremendous shoutout to Redfaced for awaring me of a certain trauma.

For quite a while already, life has been nuts. You see, between the baby's ear infections (probably has another, btw), drama with my wife's work, me getting home late from work, among many other stuff, there was one thing that could've grounded me. Venting out my stuff to a certain "friend" who's known to have a good listening ear.

Alas, "twas not meant to be. Can't remember the last time he picked up.
