OK as much as I was kidding when I said that...well, um.....yeh....you see..

OK but I went there to read a book, and the good couch was taken. SO I figured I would read my "tales for the soul" on a couch on the other side of the room with a TV (not the monster, but a 46inch plasma sleek thin beuty, with a good sound system too! But my couch sortof faced the TV. It wasn't only figure skating, they also has womens downhill skiing, and men's cross counrty.

But before my nissayon came to an end (5 old ladies came to the room to talk heart to heart), sci, some qs and comments about olympic hockey

how awesome is olympic hockey (okay you dont have to answer that but seriously i love it) does it make u feel proud or sad that callahan and drury are such a key component of the us team? drury with the go ahead against canada and callahan blocking those shots down the stretch...im a little of both...

loved beating brodeur that fat schmo...

love seeing jagr on the ice...hope he comes back to broadway...

do u think lunqvist is gonna come back tired or overworked? i kinda wanna see sweden eliminated early...

also, email me, there is something i want to send u...

I love Olympic hockey. Drury and Callahan are two great rangers and two great americans. Drury even thought the numbers are not so hot regarding his NY rangers play I still really like him. Better then winning sometimes is who you beat. Beating Martin Brouder, who the hockey media makes out to be the best thing since the invention of slices bread makes me extremely happy. I am not saying he is a bad goalie. But look at the teams he has had in front of him in his carreer. There is something to be said for that and his stats.

Jagr is still a great player. I don't think he would come back to Broadway. I could be wrong but you never know.

I have two feelings about King Henrick. On one hand I want him to win the silver with the American beating him to prove to everyone he is one of the best galies for real in the world. The other part of me wants them to go home NOW! I think he will be tired. The real question is how is the team going to respond to his condition. I think if the team plays well, you don't need him every game. Just like the Devils from about 6 years ago were such a good team they wasted Broduer by playing him to much. If they can sit him down every few games they might be OK. But to do that, they must play better as a team.

Heres to me the most important part going forward for the Rangers. Who's traded at the deadline and who is brought in? If they can find a good d'man and get rid of oneof there overpaid stiffs they might get somewhere.

And Oh, Potvin sucks!!!
