

Yossi's Journey

Posted by Yossi.L. - 07 Sep 2011 03:22

Today is day 15 of my current cycle of cleanliness, may this cycle be the everlasting cycle! I always find that the beginning of my cycles are much easier to maintain cleanliness as opposed to a couple of months in. I feel like once I've driven my number of clean days up, i tend to lose the same intense focus as in the beginning. I pray that this cycle will be different. Any tips would be appreciated. Fighting on!

Fellow soldiers,

I have had too many "coincidences" in my life for me not to see the divine hand guiding me. The latest example of "coincidence" was that, after 8 months of no blood, my wife became a niddah the day after I had my fall. Not a week later, THE NEXT FREAKING DAY! Hashem was telling me that I needed some time to rededicate myself to Shmiras Habris and in what greater expression could he have manifested his love. He let me know that I temporarily lost my privilege to touch my precious wife and I would need to earn it back once again. I wanted to share this for awhile but I have been so busy of late that I haven't gotten the chance to post.

The last few weeks, and the next couple of weeks are going to be extremely hectic for me. Not in stressful way, just busy. However, I still will keep my eyes down and my head focussed on my cleanliness.

I am not alone.

Yossi

Oilam,

My wife has decided to get involved with the women's' forum on GYE. The fact she will start getting more involved in my recovery is very exciting to me. She told me that being that she is getting more involved in GYE in specific, she battles with the urge to go to the mens side and read my posts. She can easily find me. This leads to my consideration of changing my pseudonym so that I don't have to consider her reading my posts when I am formulating/writing them. What do you think?

Yossi.L.(for now)
