

Me3's giving it a shot (For the unpteenth time but 1st time here).

Posted by Me3 - 13 Aug 2009 15:26

Clean for about 5 minutes now, do I count today as 1 or 0?

=====

=====

Re: Me3's giving it a shot (For the unpteenth time but 1st time here).

Posted by me3 - 13 Aug 2013 19:57

Stopped by for a visit. See your a moderator already. Congrats. Funny after all my time here
Guard never made me a moderator.

=====

=====

Re: Me3's giving it a shot (For the unpteenth time but 1st time here).

Posted by ZemirosShabbos - 13 Aug 2013 20:06

he probably couldn't afford your salary bracket

=====

=====

Re: Me3's giving it a shot (For the unpteenth time but 1st time here).

Posted by Dov - 13 Aug 2013 21:30

Hi there old friend!!

=====

=====

Re: Me3's giving it a shot (For the unpteenth time but 1st time here).

Posted by MendelZ - 14 Aug 2013 01:06

me3 wrote:

Lessons learned.

Just because you're about to fall or you started to fall it doesn't mean you have to go all the way. You can stop your fall and get back on track before you do yourself serious harm.

Even when you think you're in control, it's not you. God is really carrying you the whole time. Sometimes you just need to almost fall to realize that.

THIS. IS. GEVALDIG!

Just wanted to share that I am suffering some post-semi-serious-slippage right now and these two insights were just what I needed to hear but was having trouble telling myself. Thank you, me3 (and welcome back, btw).

=====
=====

Re: Me3's giving it a shot (For the unpteenth time but 1st time here).
Posted by cordnoy - 01 Mar 2015 07:01

me3 wrote:

So the other day I went biking. Along the way, while I was going pretty fast I had to swerve around somebody going the other direction my bike went off the path and the side of my wheel caught the side of the pavement. I lost control of the bike and I knew I was going to fall. Because of the speed I was going it was going to be a nasty fall.

Suddenly just as I was about to go down, the wheels caught, the bike stabilized and I was back in control as if nothing had happened.

Lessons learned.

Just because you're about to fall or you started to fall it doesn't mean you have to go all the way.
You can stop your fall and get back on track before you do yourself serious harm.

Even when you think you're in control, it's not you God is really carrying you the whole time.
Sometimes you just need to almost fall to realize that.

Good mashal, but the nimshal is even better!

Thanks

=====
=====

Re: Me3's giving it a shot (For the unpteenth time but 1st time here).
Posted by me3 - 09 Mar 2015 15:01

I don't check in that often, but it's nice to see that things I've written months ago can still provide some inspiration to others.

Wishing everyone well.

me3

=====
=====

Re: Me3's giving it a shot (For the unpteenth time but 1st time here).
Posted by Dov - 15 Mar 2015 03:21

Hey Me3! How you doing? Want to drop me a line some time stranger?

Miss you, man.

=====

=====