Just doing some reading on addiction in the library, thought others might be interested.

"Abba Mieri taught in the name of the Baal Shem Tov, ..."

-Twelve Jewish Steps to Recovery, p. 26

"I was completely hung over at our wedding... when we said our prayers, I drank the entire cup of wine and asked for more."

-Jewish Sisters in Sobriety, p. 45

"Soon I realized I was developing a strong craving and I was scared I would end up like my father if I didn't quit. Thus, drinking became a holy thing reserved for Friday nights."

-Ibid, p. 26 [any marrieds out there care to replace drinking with a different word?]

"I took a seat in the back and listened as some guy at the front of the room was talking about changing one's attitude. I snarled, "what the &#%$ is wrong with my attitude?!" A woman in front of me turned around and said, "Keep coming back, and you'll understand."

-Ibid, p. 121

"I got married, and nearly destroyed the marriage. I had stopped going to therapy when I had gotten engaged."

-Ibid, p. 85

"I am a Lesbian, Chassidic, Orthodox Jewish mother of three."

-Ibid, p. 87 [Velche Chassidus?! –Gemara Avoda Zara discusses Nashim Soleilos, there is a machlokes whether women are obligated to abstain from hirhur...]

I understand that this comment was written partly as "just having fun", but there's a point to make here-

Often someone will ask "Is it halachically permissible for/to...??

We must understand that many times, as in this case, the correct response is-

It's not a question of permissible or forbidden, it's a question of LIFE!

SSA (same sx attraction, here it's lesb.) is not living the way a person is meant to live!

Is it permissible to live your life in a diving suit underwater, coming out only to go to work?

Maybe it is, but is that the way one should live??

The fact that this woman is married and even has 3 children, does not make it ok for her to involve herself with SSA, whether SSA for a woman is specifically forbidden according to halacha or not.

That's not the way for a Jewish person, [or ANY person] to live.

Wow. It's been a bumpy ride! Who woulda thunk I would be sitting here on day ninety writing a thanks?! But here it is. Day ninety finally arrived, baruch Hashem! I wrote a song in the honor of this momentous occasion - I know I left some people out, I hope you don't mind. Every single person on this site has helped me and is helping me. Some people I didn't mention but I feel I should, are: Yechida, Yosef Hatzaddik, Blind Beggar, Gibbor120, Dms1234, Cordnoy [my OLD shver], Kilochal, Eye.nonymous. There are probably others, all the gevaldige chevra on Duvid Chaim's call. The gevaldige chevra on the Yiddish Forum, Serentcher Rov especially. Really everybody. Ein mukdam umeuchar bato"dah. Kulam ahuvim kulam berurim!
