These shevuahs only help on things that are technically not assur. Such as not bringing my phone into the bathroom and not changing the filter setting on the Youtube app.

Crazy thing just happened.

I'm waiting for a flight in an airport when I noticed an attractive woman sitting a few seats away reading a book.

A few minutes later two of her friends came over and started speaking to her in German.

I suddenly felt "fa eckelt" and no longer had any desire to even look in her direction.

:p

"Really" is my middle name. (Actually, it's my first name)

Why I Joined GYE

I was spending so much engaging my lust...

I spent too much money engaging my lust (pay-as-you-go data plans=Bad News, only one example)

I was always pushing off my learning commitments

so I was not accomplishing anything in learning and that made me upset with myself

I didn't spend enough time with my wife and that made me upset with myself

I didn't spend enough time with my kids

and that made me upset with myself

I never got enough sleep

which made me tired

which made me under-perform at work

and that made me upset with myself

and which made me snappy

which eroded my shalom bayis

and that made me upset with myself

which got me mad

and that made me upset with myself

Which made my shalom bayis worse

and that made me upset with myself

Which often made me look to lust to calm me down

and that made me upset with myself

Deep down I knew i had the potential to be so much better but I was letting myself down. I was letting my family down and I was letting Hashem down (so to speak). I felt liek a complete failure and a fake because most of the people that knew me though that I was a "great guy", a baal seichel blah, blah, blah (fill in the blah for whatever you would like)

But for most of my life, my plan was to "try harder"

These days:

I spend more time with my wife,

I spend more time smiling at my wife

I am learning more than I have since I left kollel

I am learning and spending more time with my children

I am being more productive at work

I'm getting a little more sleep ;-)

I am loving my life despite the challenges that I am being thrown

)

I went from a miserable, pitiful existence to a life full of hope opportunity and fulfillment.

I still have a lot of work ahead of me. I am not deluded to think that "I got this under control", but I see the path leading out of the maze.

Love,

Eli
