

On the way to 90 (and Beyond)

Posted by Binyomin5766 - 31 Dec 2008 13:57

Well, I've been clean for 10 days now. Getting through the nights is the most difficult because that is when I've been most likely to fall. On the other hand, my state of mind and the content of my thoughts during the day are the fuel for the fire. If I can control my mind during the day, controlling my body at night is that much easier. Some days have been more difficult, and my coworkers aren't exactly concerned about purity or modesty or any other such thing. G-d willing, I'll make it through today and then get a bit of a break. I have company paid holidays tomorrow and Friday (and at least some of my family will be with me each day). Shabbos has always been easier for me, so it's possible that things will be smoother for four days. I just have to get through today!

=====

Re: On the way to 90

Posted by Binyomin5766 - 18 Mar 2009 20:14

Either tonight or tomorrow night I am planning on going out and buying a bottle of Scotch and some herring. If all goes well, I will be drinking a L'Chaim at Shabbos day kiddush. Life is busy, and that is good. A busy life leaves little time for the mind to go where it doesn't belong. Oh

=====

Re: On the way to 90

Posted by the.guard - 19 Mar 2009 00:48

Lichayim Ben! ;D We will all have you in mind at our kiddush. We will be with you in "spirit" (no-pun intended :-)

=====

Re: On the way to 90

Posted by Binyomin5766 - 19 Mar 2009 12:12

Actually you would have to be with me in "spirits." (pun intended and enjoyed way too much).

Day 88 clean completed yesterday. I am continuing to spiritually and psychologically prepare myself for a new phase of the fight. With the milestone about to be fewer and further between, I have to take a different approach. No more "Just x more days until...." Now the war will become about taking new ground in my life and committing it to Hashem. I can't allow myself to get into a trench mentality, for that leads only to stalemate. Instead, I must work day by day to advance, even if it is only just a fraction of an inch. The object is to keep moving forward in kedusha. While I must keep a focus on being shmiras habris, the field of battle must also be expanded. There are many areas of my spiritual life that must be strengthened. It is so easy to get tunnel vision, to get overly focused on just one thing. In a lot of ways, I believe the addiction is actually a symptom. We try to fill ourselves with pleasures and, as has been so well demonstrated in the story in the chizuk email, we find that the quick and easy pleasure only leaves us empty. Day by day, I must work harder to fill myself with Hashem and Torah.

=====
=====

Re: On the way to 90
Posted by battleworn - 19 Mar 2009 12:44

Still think everyone should learn from me, Battleworn?

I'm absolutely positively 100% certain that everyone should learn from you!!! But by now, nobody needs me to tell them that; it's abundantly obvious!

=====
=====

Re: On the way to 90
Posted by the.guard - 19 Mar 2009 13:44

Powerful stuff, Ben. Thanks for the inspiration!

=====
=====

Re: On the way to 90
Posted by Ano Nymous - 19 Mar 2009 19:56

Amazing Ben!! You should continue to see much success in everything you do (for the right reasons). :D

Congrats!!

=====

=====

Re: On the way to 90

Posted by Binyomin5766 - 20 Mar 2009 14:41

All that praise is a bit embarrassing! At any rate if all goes well I will complete my 90th day tonight! My wife bought the herring yesterday and I'm buying the scotch on the way home this afternoon. G-d willing, I will be drinking a L'Chaim at my Shabbos day meal. I almost wish I had a partner in town to celebrate with. My wife knows and she will be with me to drink the L'Chaim, but in some respects I don't think she really understands what I've been struggling with or how difficult making this change has been.

Have a wonderful Shabbos everyone!

=====

=====

Re: On the way to 90

Posted by Phillip - 20 Mar 2009 18:51

You inspire me to carry on fighting, today is B"H my 63rd day clean. Reading your battle helps me follow in your footsteps.

Enjoy the herring.

=====

=====

Re: On the way to 90

Posted by Ykv_schwartz - 21 Mar 2009 19:40

Mazel Tov Ben. Your accomplishments give us all great chizzuk.

=====

Re: On the way to 90

Posted by the.guard - 21 Mar 2009 21:41

Ben, I'm sorry I had to remove you from the 90 day chart....

BUT I PUT YOU UP ON THE "WALL-OF-HASHEM'S-HONOR" CHART INSTEAD!!!

MAZAL TOV. MAZAL TOV! I had a lechayim with some herring this Shabbos morning, especially in your honor!

May this be the start of a new phase in your progress. May you go Me'Chayil el Choyil -- Strength to Strength!

In honor of your reaching 90 days, I want to share with you a beautiful excerpt from an eye-opening article that Boruch shared with me recently.

For the full article, see here.

What the original AAs were shooting for - and what they aimed their program at - was not mere sobriety. That would have been the "common-sense" approach, the way of worldly wisdom, the reasonable-level-of-aspiration gambit. But the founders of AA were men moved by inspiration. They were coming at the problem with the uncommon sense of men under guidance.

The common-sense approach had already been tried and it had failed. If you set a drunk's level of aspiration at mere abstinence - "Why don't you be a good fellow, use your will power; and give the stuff up" - it did not work.

The poor candidate for reform was back drinking again in short order. The discovery that launched AA in the first place was that if an alcoholic were somehow to be rocketed into a state way beyond abstinence, if he were to achieve a real spiritual conversion, an utterly new relationship with God, then permanent abstinence would automatically occur as a blessed and life-saving by-product. That was how it happened with Bill. That was how it happened with Dr. Bob. That was how it happened with most of the first hundred members.

And I bless you, that THAT is how it should happen with you, BEN!

=====

Re: On the way to 90

Posted by Binyomin5766 - 22 Mar 2009 01:19

Thank you, everyone! I had my L'Chaim today. My son enjoyed it, but my wife took a sip and that was it. (BTW, my son has no idea that I have this addiction that I'm fighting.)

This is indeed a new phase, like I posted before. I now need to transition out of the milestone mentality. G-d willing, I will expand this journey into a complete spiritual overhaul. At any rate, a gitte woch to everyone!

=====

Re: On the way to 90

Posted by the.guard - 28 Mar 2009 23:33

So we don't get to hear from you any more Ben, now that you hit 90? It should be the opposite. Now you are promoted to give OTHERS Chizuk as well! ;D

=====

=====

Re: On the way to 90

Posted by Binyomin5766 - 29 Mar 2009 01:31

I have actually replied here and there on other threads, just not very often. Life is a little hectic at the moment. Work, especially, has been busy. Out of three programmers in the company, I've been the only one in office most days. And to make life interesting, I've had to pinch hit for my manager in a few situations. I really don't use the computer at home, so there you go, my time is pretty much gone. Things are still going well on my end, but you're right, GUE, I should be moving up to giving others chizuk in my own little way. I may not have the yeshiva education, but at least I have lots of life experience to draw on....

=====

=====

Re: On the way to 90

Posted by battleworn - 31 Mar 2009 10:55
I'm hurt.

In addition to experience, you also have a very special Neshomoh, that produces great chizuk. You have a whole lot to offer to all the holy warriors on this forum. So keep the tips and chizuk coming as much as you can!

=====

=====